Department of the Treasury

Publication 1421 (9-88)

Preface

This booklet has been prepared by the IRS' Office of Disclosure as a general guide for Inspectors General and other appropriate Federal officials who may need to access Federal tax information for nontax Federal criminal investigations. The guide discusses in broad terms the types of records maintained by IRS, how to obtain access under Internal Revenue Code section 6103, and responsibilities for the use and protection of material so obtained. This guide is not intended to be comprehensive nor all-inclusive in its descriptions of IRS files and the procedures for access (e.g., IRS has many other files which do not qualify as investigative materials and, therefore, are not discussed in the text). The guide is aimed primarily at Inspectors General due to their responsibilities for investigating Federal criminal violations and the IRS' longstanding liaison and rapport with these officials. The guide can and should, however, be circulated among any agency personnel who could benefit from its contents. Questions and comments about the guide are welcomed and may be addressed to the Chief, Disclosure Operations Section, EX:D:D, Office of Disclosure, at 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224. Calls can be directed to (202) 566-3908.

Mission of the Internal Revenue Service

The mission of the Internal Revenue Service is to collect the proper amount of tax revenues at the least cost to the public. To accomplish that mission it strives to encourage and achieve the highest possible degree of voluntary compliance with the tax laws and regulations and to conduct itself so as to warrant the highest degree of public confidence in its integrity, efficiency and fairness. The Service advises the public of its rights and responsibilities, determines the extent of compliance and the causes of noncompliance, and does all things needed for proper administration and enforcement of the tax laws.

Service Organization

The Internal Revenue Service is a component part of the Department of the Treasury. The Service is headed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue who serves under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury.

The Internal Revenue Service consists of a National Office in Washington, D.C., and a field organization. The latter consists of 7 Internal Revenue regions, each headed by a regional commissioner who reports to the deputy commissioner; 63 Internal Revenue districts, each headed by a district director, and 10 service centers, each headed by a director who reports to a regional commissioner; a computer center where our complete master file on all taxpayers is maintained and a computer center which is responsible for processing our payroll and for various management information items. In addition, there are in the field 7 regional inspectors and 7 regional counsels, who report to the Assistant Commissioner (Inspection) and the Chief Counsel, respectively, in Washington, D.C. In each Internal Revenue district there are offices in communities where concentration of workload in examination, employee plans, exempt organizations, collection and criminal activities requires the assignment of personnel. Information included in the files of these activities and how to access the information is discussed below. IRS' organizational chart and boundaries of regions, districts and service centers are reflected in Appendices A and B.

Investigative Records

Each function maintains a myriad of records. Investigative records, for the most part, are originated by organizational components at the district (or local) level.

The principal organizational components of the typical district office are the immediate office of the district director, the Examination Division, Collection Division, Taxpayer Service Division, Criminal Investigation Division and Resources Management Division. There is an Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations Division in some districts. Four of the above divisions work with investigatory records pertaining to Federal taxes or to obligations created by the Internal Revenue Code or other Federal statutes. Descriptions of records (pertaining to individuals) which qualify as systems of records under the Privacy Act of 1974 are reflected in the Federal Register, Vol. 53, No. 40, March 1, 1988. The investigatory records maintained by the above referenced divisions are described in the following pages.

Examination Division Records

These records reflect investigative material related to the examination (audit) of income, employment, gift, estate, and excise tax returns of individuals and businesses. The records are maintained in district offices and service centers which have jurisdiction over the area where the taxpayer is located. Information is maintained on taxpayers being considered for examination or those being examined for tax determination purposes. The files include workpapers which reflect financial transactions, bank statements, corporate minutes, third party contacts, involvement in alleged criminal activities, appraisals and valuations, tax determinations, data on foreign corporations and financial information as to foreign operations, the revenue agent report (which reflects examination results), internal use forms, etc. Included in Examination Division records are files maintained on taxpayers who may be abusing the tax laws through the use of tax shelters and flow-through entities or records which concern tax evasion schemes or areas of non-compliance grouped by industry, occupation, or financial transactions (e.g., return preparers, political contributions or corporate kickbacks).

Criminal Investigation Division Records

These records reflect investigations related to taxpayers who failed to file or fraudulently filed Federal tax returns or who may have violated the tax laws. The records include copies of income tax returns, special agent reports, revenue agent reports, reports from police and other investigative agencies, memorandums of interviews of witnesses, question and answer statements of witnesses, affidavits, collateral requests and replies (cooperative investigation efforts of other IRS jurisdictional district offices), informant items, newspaper and magazine articles and other published data, financial information from public records and other similar and related documents.

Perhaps the most informative of these records are narrative reports prepared by special agents. The most complete of these is called the special agent report which is a comprehensive record of the results of the investigation. Included in this report is a section on the history of the taxpayer which includes personal information such as name and aliases, age, marital status, number of dependents, education, military service, reputation and criminal record. It also includes financial information such as business addresses during pertinent years, sources of income, the taxpayer's connection with a business with emphasis on the taxpayer's responsibility and participation in the income producing and accounting phases of the business operation, a general familiarity with books of account, and knowledge of tax matters. Most importantly, it contains evidence to be used in criminal tax proceedings. These reports always contain exhibits which are used to document findings, conclusions and recommendations.

Collection Division Records

These records reflect investigations related to individuals or businesses who failed to pay any tax due with a requested tax return or who failed to file any tax return.

The records include descriptions of contacts with taxpayers, their representatives, their employers, and other third parties (creditors, banks, neighbors, partners, spouses, business associates, etc.), civil suit recommendations including a personal history of the taxpayer and names and addresses of witnesses, the taxpayers current and potential financial condition, past criminal activity etc. Investigation records are maintained concerning "Taxpayer Delinquent Accounts" (accounts of Federal tax assessments which have not been paid within a specified period of time), "Taxpayer Delinquency Investigations" (taxpayers believed to be delinquent in filing Federal tax returns), "Offers in Compromise" (taxpayers who have submitted an offer to compromise a Federal tax Liability), "One Hundred Percent Penalty Cases" (assessments made against responsible individuals for failing to pay to IRS employee withholding and social security contributions) and "Litigation Cases" (taxpayers on whom Federal tax assessments have been made but against whom litigation has been initiated or is being considered by the Government or who have instituted suits against the Government).

Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations Division

These records reflect investigative material related to the examination of the operations of tax-exempt organizations (as well as those organizations which have applied for but not yet been granted exemption) and employee benefit plans. The files may contain copies of returns filed by exempt organizations. Examples of such returns include Form 990, "Return of Organization Exempt from Income Tax", Form 990 PF, "Return of Private Foundation (under Section 501(c)(3), or Section 4947(a)(1) Trust Treated as a Private Foundation", Form 1041-A, "U.S. Information Return—Trust Accumulation of Charitable Amounts", Form 4720, "Return of Certain Excise Taxes on Charities and Other Persons Under Chapter 41 and 42 of the Internal Revenue Code", Form 5578, "Annual Certification of Racial Nondiscrimination for a Private School Exempt From Federal Income Tax", Form 5768, "Election/Revocation Election by an Eligible Section 501(c)(3) Organization to Make Expenditures to Influence Legislation", and Form 990-T, "Exempt Organization Business Income Tax Return". The files include the examination report, workpapers, notification letter issued as a result of examination, and other information similar to Examination Division records (as previously discussed).

Administrative files are maintained in key districts relative to determinations for the eligibility of the tax exempt status of organizations and deferred compensation plans. These records contain the application for exemption and supporting documents, file memoranda, conference report, and ruling or determination letters. Many of these records are publicly available pursuant to section 6104 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Key districts are those districts which have jurisdiction over employee plans and exempt organizations activities and records of several (associate) district offices. There are 10 key district offices. A list of key districts and the associate districts covered by each is as follows:

Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations Key Districts

Inspection Records

Inspection was established in the Internal Revenue Service to provide an independent appraisal of all Service activities and to assist management in maintaining the highest standards of honesty and integrity among Service employees. The authority and responsibility for Inspection programs are assigned to the Assistant Commissioner (Inspection) who reports directly to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue and to the Inspector General, Department of Treasury. Inspection consists of a National Office and seven regional Inspection offices. At both the national and regional levels, Inspection is divided functionally into two divisions, i.e. Internal Audit and Internal Security.

Internal Audit Division is a professional auditing staff which provides a constructive and protective service to all levels of management through the independent review and appraisal of Service operations.

Internal Security Division is an investigative service which is responsible for planning, developing, conducting, and controlling activities designed to ensure that the highest standards of honesty, integrity, loyalty, security and conduct are maintained among Service employees.

In order to accomplish its mission of protecting the integrity of the Service, Internal Security has been delegated numerous responsibilities and functions. These include:

Programs to investigate and detect criminal and serious administrative misconduct by Service employees; actions of non employees to corrupt or interfere with Service operations through bribery, threats or assaults, or unauthorized disclosure or misuse of tax information; and misconduct by tax practitioners.

Background investigations of applicants for employment with the Service; applicants for enrollment to practice before the Service; and investigations of accidents involving Service personnel and property.

Probes and tests of high risk integrity areas to detect corruption involving Service personnel and activities.

Extremely confidential investigations of complaints concerning high level officials of the Service, and special studies and investigations as requested by the Commissioner, the Inspector General and other components of the Department of the Treasury.

Categories of individuals covered by Inspection Privacy Act systems of records include the following:

Current and former Service employees and such employees of certain other Treasury Bureaus who were subjects of criminal investigations such as bribery, embezzlement, conflicts of interest, and unauthorized disclosure or use of tax information.

Current and former employees of the Service and of certain other Treasury Bureaus who were subjects of serious administrative misconduct investigations.

Current and former employees and applicants of IRS and certain other Treasury Bureaus who were subject of character and other background type investigations.

Persons who were subjects of investigations for attempting to interfere with the administration of the Internal Revenue Service through threats, assaults or forcible interference with Internal Revenue employees.

Persons who were subjects of investigations for attempting to bribe or otherwise improperly influence Internal Revenue employees.

Persons who were subjects of background type investigations concerning their application to represent taxpayers before the IRS.

State and local government employees or tax return preparers who were the subjects of investigations for the alleged unauthorized disclosure of confidential Federal tax information.

Attorneys, C.P.A.s, and other persons enrolled to practice before the IRS who were the subjects of investigations of complaints of unethical or other improper conduct.

Current and former employees of IRS and certain other Treasury Bureaus who were involved in accidents on Department of Treasury property or other persons involved in accidents with Department of Treasury employees.

Certain third party persons, complainants, or other witnesses.

Categories of records in Inspection systems of records consist of Inspection reports of investigation, including exhibits, attachments, affidavits, statements, documentary evidence, results of legal action, administrative adjudications and miscellaneous records concerning information related to Inspection's mission which is not specific or significant enough to initiate an investigation when received.

Systems of records containing investigative material are located in the Records Management and Central Services Section of Inspection, National Office.

Agencies which have a need to obtain information or review Inspection files must submit a letter of accreditation to the Director, Internal Security Division. Inspection files or information will not be released unless current accreditation letters are on file from the requesting agency. The disclosure officer of the Inspection Service in the National Office should be contacted for advice relative to letters of accreditation. Any tax information reflected in the Inspection files generally must be requested pursuant to IRC §6103(i)(1) and (2), which are discussed later in this booklet.

Associate Chief Counsel (Technical)

The following records are maintained by the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical) in the National Office. These may include copies of investigatory records and other information which would have originated in field offices and records which would reflect taxpayer contacts with the National Office which would not be reflected in district files.

Correspondence Control and Records

The correspondence records contain the records of communications between the Service and taxpayers or their representatives. The records include letters, memos, forms, and miscellaneous documents relating to a taxpayer's request for a ruling or information letter. Also maintained are requests for technical advice from a district office regarding the handling of specific issues on a taxpayer's return. These files contain the taxpayer's position, the district's position, and may include tax returns and revenue agents reports on the audit of a tax return. The files contain a variety of supporting documents for the taxpayer and the Service, third party communications, and internal forms used for the disposition of the case. Form M-5945, Reports of Significant Matters, is completed to highlight significant tax problems or developments and is associated with the taxpayer's file and maintained as a permanent part of the file. Access to this file is made by taxpayer name.

Artist File

The Artist File contains appraisal documents and the Commissioner's Art Panel decisions on the value of art works of individual artists. Requests for documents in this file are rare since the valuation of art work does not involve a large number of taxpayers. The records are maintained in alphabetical order by artist name.

Expert Witness and Fee Appraiser Files

The Expert Witness and Fee Appraiser File contains the names of potential expert witnesses for litigation and fee appraisers for art valuation. The records contain biographical sketches of individuals. Information may be retrieved by individual names or by an index of the individual's specialty. The records are primarily used by Service personnel to obtain information from witnesses and appraisers relating to their current cases.

Conditions Governing Access to Investigative Material in Tax Records

Sections 6103(i)(1) and (2) of the Internal Revenue Code set forth the conditions which govern access to tax information by officers and employees of Federal agencies for use in proceedings pertaining to the enforcement of a Federal criminal statute not relating to tax administration. IRC §6103(i)(5) governs the disclosure of a return or return information for the purpose of locating a fugitive from justice. The methods which must be used to obtain information vary according to the type of material being sought and the proposed use of the material.

The types of material in Service tax files are defined as either "returns" or "return information". "Return information" is divided into taxpayer return information and return information other than taxpayer return information. The definitions for these types of material are as follows:

"Return"—any tax or information return, declaration of estimated tax, or claim for refund required by, provided for, or permitted under, the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code (26 U.S.C.) which is filed with Service by, on behalf of, or with respect to, any person, and any amendment or supplement, including supporting schedules, attachments, or lists which are supplemental to, or part of the return.

"Return Information"—all tax information relating to a taxpayer which is contained within the files of the Internal Revenue Service. Return information is divided into two distinct classifications:

1. Taxpayer return information—that information filed with, or furnished to, the Internal Revenue Service by or on behalf of a taxpayer. An example of taxpayer return information is that portion of an interview between an IRS agent and the representative of a named taxpayer functioning in that capacity, discussing the taxpayer.
2. Return information other than taxpayer return information—that return information not provided to the Internal Revenue Service by or on behalf of a taxpayer, i.e., information obtained from third parties who are not representatives of the taxpayer. Examples of return information other than taxpayer return information are:
 - a. The books and records of a named taxpayer furnished to the Service by a third party who was not acting on behalf of the taxpayer.
 - b. That portion of an interview between an IRS agent and a third party discussing a named taxpayer.
 - c. The fact that a named taxpayer filed or failed to file a return.

Disclosure of returns and return information (including taxpayer return information) under the authority of IRC §6103(i)(1) and §6103(i)(2) is subject to a determination by the Service that the disclosure would not identify a confidential informant or seriously impair a civil or criminal tax investigation.

Requests Pursuant to IRC §6103(i)(1)

Returns and taxpayer return information may be secured by an ex parte order issued by a Federal district court, judge or magistrate under IRC §6103(i)(1).

IRC §6103(i)(1) provides that the Attorney General, Deputy Attorney General, the Associate Attorney General, any Assistant Attorney General, any U.S. Attorney, any special prosecutor (independent counsel) appointed under 28 U.S.C. 593 and any attorney in charge of an organized crime strike force may authorize an application for an ex parte order from a Federal district court judge or magistrate allowing officers and employees of a Federal agency access to returns and return information. This information shall be disclosed only for use in:

- (a) preparation for an administrative or judicial proceeding relating to the enforcement of a specifically designated Federal criminal statute (not involving tax administration);
- (b) an investigation which may result in such a proceeding; or
- (c) any Federal grand jury proceeding pertaining to enforcement of a criminal statute to which the U.S. or a Federal agency is or may be a party.

Prior to the submission of an application for the order, the responsible official should notify the appropriate IRS district director that such action is planned. This notice should include all relevant details so that the district can begin assembling the requested information, and determine whether disclosure would identify a confidential informant or seriously impair a civil or criminal tax investigation. Applications may be submitted to either Federal magistrates or Federal district court judges and must demonstrate that there is reasonable cause to believe that a specific Federal crime has been committed, there is reasonable cause to believe that the return or return information sought is relevant to the offense, that the information will be used exclusively in a Federal criminal investigation or proceeding concerning such act, and that the information cannot reasonably be obtained from another source.

A sample Application for Ex Parte Order to Disclose Returns and Return Information and a sample Order for Disclosure of Returns and Return Information are presented in the Department of Justice's United States Attorney's Manual and are included herein as Appendices C and D. Guidance in applying for an ex parte court order can be obtained from the Department of Justice's Criminal Division, Office of Enforcement Operation, at (202) or FTS 786-4987.

Requests Pursuant to IRC §6103(i)(2)

IRC §6103(i)(2) provides for the head of a Federal agency, or the Inspector General thereof, or, in the case of the Department of Justice, the Attorney General, Deputy Attorney General, the Associate Attorney General, any Assistant Attorney General, the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Administrator of the Drug Enforcement Administration, any U.S. Attorney, any special prosecutor (independent counsel) appointed under 28 U.S.C. 593 or any attorney in charge of an organized crime strike force, to request in writing the disclosure of return information (other than taxpayer return information) to officers and employees of such agency that are personally and directly engaged in and solely for their use in preparation for any administrative or judicial proceeding, or investigation which may result in such a proceeding, that pertains to the enforcement of a specifically designated Federal criminal statute (not involving tax administration), or any Federal grand jury proceeding pertaining to the enforcement of a criminal statute to which the U.S. or such Federal agency is or may be a party.

IRC §6103(i)(2) should be utilized only when the requester's sole interest is in obtaining return information, other than taxpayer return information.

Written requests for this kind of information should be made by the head or Inspector General of any Federal agency, the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Administrator of the Drug Enforcement Administration, or any of the officials permitted to authorize an application under §6103(i)(1). Requests under IRC §6103(i)(2) should be addressed to the appropriate IRS district director.

The request must set forth the taxpayer's name and address, the taxable period(s) for which information is sought, the statutory authority under which the enforcement proceeding is being conducted and the specific reason(s) why the information sought is relevant to the enforcement proceeding. If the taxpayer's tax identification number (i.e., Social Security or Employer Identification Number, as appropriate) is available, such number also should be furnished.

The permitted uses of such information are identical to those for information obtained under IRC §6103(i)(1), and the request must explain the intended use. The requester also is expected to provide advance notice of intent to make a request under IRC §6103(i)(2).

It is not necessary to make a separate request under IRC §6103(i)(2) if an application under IRC §6103(i)(1) also is contemplated since an ex parte order also can encompass return information other than taxpayer return information.

A sample letter to be used when requesting IRC §6103(i)(2) information is presented in the Department of Justice's United States Attorney Manual and is included herein as Appendix E.

Requests Pursuant to IRC §6103(i)(5)

A. Any official who may authorize an application to a Federal District court judge or magistrate under IRC §6103(i)(1) also may authorize an application under IRC §6103(i)(5) for disclosure of returns and return information exclusively for use in locating a Federal fugitive. Applications must establish that:

1. A Federal arrest warrant relating to the commission of a Federal felony has been issued for the taxpayer who is now a fugitive;
2. The return or return information is being sought solely for use in locating the taxpayer; and
3. There is "reasonable cause" to believe that the return or return information will further efforts to locate the taxpayer.

A sample Application and Ex Parte Order for Disclosure of Returns and Return information as presented in the Department of Justice's United States Attorney's Manual are included herein as Appendices F and G.

Disclosure of Indications of Non-tax Federal Criminal Violations Pursuant to IRC §6103(i)(3)(A)

On its own initiative the Internal Revenue Service is permitted to disclose return information (other than taxpayer return information), which may constitute evidence of a violation of a Federal criminal statute to the extent necessary to apprise the head of the appropriate Federal agency charged with the enforcement responsibility over such statute.

The information is disclosed under the authority of IRC §6103(i)(3)(A). An agency receiving such information may disclose it to personnel within the agency only as necessary to enforce the laws at issue. Employees having access to the information should be aware of the penalty provisions of IRC §7213 and §7431 pertaining to the unauthorized disclosure of returns and return information, and of the safeguard requirements of IRC §6103(p)(4) as discussed later in this booklet (see Appendices H, I, and J for copies of these three provisions).

The Service is always interested in ways to assist other law enforcement agencies via IRC §6103(i)(3)(A). If a Federal Agency wishes to notify the Service of specific Federal nontax criminal violations to look for during Service investigations, this information should be shared with the Service's Office of Disclosure, Disclosure Operations Section, at (202) or FTS 566-3908. We will circulate the information to appropriate IRS employees to assist them in identifying areas of possible nontax criminal activities.

Penalties

Criminal Penalties Under IRC §7213—(Appendix H)

IRC §7213 provides criminal penalties of up to a $5,000 fine, imprisonment of up to five years, or both for the unauthorized willful disclosure of a return or return information. An unauthorized disclosure is made willfully when it is done voluntarily and intentionally with full knowledge that it is wrong.

Civil Liability Under IRC §7431—(Appendix I)

In addition to the criminal penalties imposed by IRC §7213, civil penalties are provided in IRC §7431 when a taxpayer is damaged as a result of an unlawful disclosure of the taxpayer's return or return information.

Safeguards Under IRC §6103(p)(4)—(Appendix J)

Information provided under IRC §6103(i) must be safeguarded under the conditions of IRC §6103(p)(4). Copies of IRS Publication 1075, Tax Information Security Guidelines, are available from the Office of Disclosure, EX:D:D, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224.

Advice

The Office of Disclosure may be contacted concerning any questions regarding the disclosure of returns and return information. Also, each IRS district office has a "disclosure officer" who may be contacted for advice concerning the availability of such information. Addresses and telephone numbers of district disclosure officers are provided in Appendix K.
