

Show us the JUNK IN YOUR TRUNK

... and win an organizer for your patrol vehicle

For eight hours a day, the patrol car is an officer's home and office. It must carry everything an officer needs during a shift, and while much of it sits in the front seat, most of this equipment lands in what could be called the patrol vehicle junkyard — the trunk.

Filled to overflowing like an overstuffed suitcase, these junky trunks hold cones, blankets, first-aid kits, cameras, ballistic shields, firearms, ammo, crime scene tape, computer CPUs and more.

What's in your trunk?

Show us the junkiest trunks among your patrol vehicle line-up and you could be part of a select number of departments equipped with one of 9 FREE trunk organizing systems.

To participate, send us a picture of the offending trunk and write 100-200 words on why you're deserving of some trunk organization along with the attached entry form. Entry form can be downloaded at: www.officer.com/magazines/enewsletter/LET/JunkInYourTrunk.pdf

ENTRY FORM

Department Name: _____

Contact Name: _____

Address: _____

Phone: _____

E-mail: _____

Vehicle Make & Model: _____

Attach 100-200 word description explaining why your trunk deserves some organization.

Entries must be mailed to:

Law Enforcement Technology

Attn. Ronnie Garrett

1233 Janesville Ave.

Fort Atkinson, WI 53538

Deadline: May 31, 2007.

The editorial staff of Law Enforcement Technology will review submissions to determine the most deserving trunks. Winners will be announced in the August issue of Law Enforcement Technology. (Agencies receiving a trunk organizing system agree to test their organizer and participate in a trunk organization product article slated for Law Enforcement Technology's November issue. Some products must be installed by agency.)
