

RESEARCH PAPER 04/50
23 JUNE 2004

European Parliament elections 2004

Elections to the European Parliament were held across the 25 states of the European Union from the 10-13 June 2004.

In UK, the elections were on 10 June. The United Kingdom Independence Party made the biggest gains, securing the third highest share of the vote and 12 seats. Both Labour and the Conservatives lost seats, and together failed to win half of the popular vote.

The results of the 1999 European Parliament elections are summarised in Research Paper 99/64. The results of European Parliament elections from 1979-1994 are summarised in Research Paper 99/57.

Local elections in England and Wales were held on 10 June 2004. The results are summarised in Research Paper 04/49.

The results of the mayoral and Greater London Assembly elections held in London, also on 10 June 2004, are summarised in Research Paper 04/48.

Summary of main points

- Elections to the European Parliament were held in all 25 states of the European Union between 10 and 13 June 2004. Elections in the 12 UK regions took place on 10 June.
- Following the entry of 10 new states into the EU, the UK now has 78 European parliament seats, compared to 87 before the elections.
- The United Kingdom Independence Party made the biggest gains in the UK, coming third in terms of share of the vote, and winning 12 seats.
- The Conservatives and Labour failed to gain 50 percent of the vote between them, and both lost seats.
- Adjusting for the change in seat numbers, the Liberal Democrats gained two seats. The Green Party, Plaid Cymru and the Scottish National Party maintained representation in the parliament.
- In Northern Ireland, Sinn Fein won a European Parliament seat for the first time, at the expense of the SDLP.
- Turnout was up compared with the 1999 elections, especially in the 4 regions which piloted all-postal ballots.
- In total, there are 732 Members of the European Parliament. Preliminary indications suggest that the European People's Party group, which includes the Conservatives, hold a slightly higher share of seats than prior to the elections, while the Socialist group, which includes Labour, has a lower proportion of the total.

I Results in the United Kingdom

European Parliament Elections were held across the UK on 10 June 2004. In Great Britain, the d'Hondt quota system was used, as in 1999, to allocate seats at regional level. Northern Ireland retained its system of electing its 3 MEPs by Single Transferable Vote.

Following the entry of 10 new states to the EU, the UK now has 78 seats in the European Parliament, compared to 87 before the election. The changes in seat numbers are shown below:

Changes in regional seat allocations

| | Pre-elections | Post-elections | Change |
|--------------------------|---------------|----------------|--------|
| North East | 4 | 3 | -1 |
| North West | 10 | 9 | -1 |
| Yorkshire and The Humber | 7 | 6 | -1 |
| East Midlands | 6 | 6 | 0 |
| West Midlands | 8 | 7 | -1 |
| East | 8 | 7 | -1 |
| London | 10 | 9 | -1 |
| South East | 11 | 10 | -1 |
| South West | 7 | 7 | 0 |
| Wales | 5 | 4 | -1 |
| Scotland | 8 | 7 | -1 |
| Northern Ireland | 3 | 3 | 0 |
| UK | 87 | 78 | -9 |

For the first time, Gibraltar was included in the South West region. All-postal ballots were held in the North East, North West, Yorkshire & The Humber and East Midlands regions.

Data used throughout are those collected from regional returning officers. They are provisional.

A. Definitions, abbreviations and technical points

1. Turnout and rejected ballots

Throughout the UK results, turnout is defined as valid votes cast divided by the registered electorate. This is a standard convention used by the Library for domestic election data.

In its forthcoming report on the elections, the Electoral Commission intends to include rejected ballots in its calculations of turnout. Full data regarding rejected ballots are not, however, yet available.

Data that have been published regarding rejected ballots have generally been for ballots rejected at the count. Statistics of ballots rejected before the count are not yet available for most regions. The exception to this is the North East, an all-postal ballot region, where 18,700, or 63 percent, of the 29,500 rejected, were rejected before the count.

2. Party abbreviations

The following party abbreviations are used:

Party abbreviations

|---|--|-----------|
|  | Conservatives (Scottish Conservative and Unionist in Scotland) | Con |
|  | Labour | Lab |
|  | Liberal Democrats | LDem |
|  | United Kingdom Independence Party | UKIP |
|  | Green Party | Green |
|  | British National Party | BNP |
|  | Respect - The Unity Coalition (George Galloway) | Respect |
|  | Plaid Cymru | PC |
|  | Scottish National Party | SNP |
|  | Scottish Socialist Party | SSP |
|  | Democratic Unionist Party | DUP |
|  | Sinn Fein | Sinn Fein |
|  | Ulster Unionists Party | UUP |
|  | Social Democratic and Labour Party | SDLP |
|  | Socialist Environmentalist Alliance | SEA |
|  | Other parties and independents | Others |

3. The d'Hondt quota system

The system used for allocating European Parliament seats in Great Britain uses the d'Hondt quota system. Seats are allocated in successive rounds. In each round, votes cast for each party are divided by the number of seats the party has already been allocated in the region plus 1. The party with the highest remaining total in the round wins the seat.

The system is demonstrated by a 3-party, 5-seat example below:

D'Hondt seat allocation

| Round | Party A | Party B | Party C |
|-------------|------------|------------|------------|
| 1 | 700 | 400 | 300 |
| 2 | 350 | 400 | 300 |

B. Summary results: Great Britain

- The Conservatives won 27 seats, 36 percent of the total, on 27 percent of the vote. Adjusting for the overall reduction in seat numbers, they lost 8 seats. Their share of the vote fell by 9 percentage points relative to the 1999 European Parliament elections, the largest fall of any party.
- Labour came second, winning 23 percent of the votes and 25 percent of the seats. Adjusting for the overall reduction in numbers, they lost 6 seats. Their share of the vote was 19 percentage points lower than at the 2001 general election.
- UKIP were the biggest winners of the election, polling 16 percent, the third highest share of the vote, and winning 12 seats, an adjusted gain of 10. Their share of the vote was 9 percentage points up on 1999.
- The Liberal Democrat share on the vote was 2 percentage points higher than in 1999, but 4 percentage points lower than at the 2001 general election. They also won 12 seats, a net adjusted gain of 2.
- The Green Party, the SNP and Plaid Cymru retained representation in the Parliament.

Turnout

- Turnout across the UK was 38.4 percent. This is measured as valid votes cast as a share of the electorate.
- The 38.5 percent is the highest recorded in the UK at a European Parliament election and compares with 24.0 percent in 1999. Turnout increased compared to 1999 in all regions.
- Turnout in all-postal ballot areas was over 5 percentage points higher than in other areas.
- Of the electoral regions, turnout was lowest in Scotland, which did not hold local elections on the same day.
- Turnout was highest in Northern Ireland, which uses a different electoral system to the rest of the UK.

- Labour’s share of the vote in the North East was 25 percentage points lower than at the 2001 general election, the largest such difference of any party in any UK region. Despite this, they only narrowly missed winning 2 of the 3 seats.
- The Conservative share of the vote fell by 9 percentage points compared to the last European Parliament elections in 1999.
- In terms of share of the vote, the Liberal Democrats performed better in the North East than in all regions other than the South West.
- “Metric Martyr” Neil Herron polled almost 40,000 votes.
- The North East held an all-postal ballot.

Northern Ireland

- Northern Ireland uses a different system to the rest of the UK for electing its three MEPs. The single transferable vote system reallocates the surplus votes of those elected and the votes of those eliminated to remaining candidates.
- Jim Allister of the DUP and Bairbre de Bruin of Sinn Fein were elected in the first stage. Jim Nicholson of the UUP was elected ahead of the SDLP's Martin Morgan in the third stage, after the votes of the other candidates were reallocated.
- Sinn Fein won a seat in the European Parliament for the first time, at the expense of the SDLP.
- Sinn Fein and the DUP increased their shares of the vote relative to both the 1999 European Parliament and 2001 general elections, while the shares for both the SDLP and the UUP fell.

C. Results at local level

Provisional results are available for shire districts, metropolitan boroughs, London boroughs and unitary authorities in England and Wales. In Scotland, provisional data are available at Westminster constituency level. No local level data are available for Northern Ireland.

The map overleaf shows the party winning the largest share of the vote in each of these local areas in Great Britain.

Two appendix reference tables are attached, showing local area data for Great Britain. Appendix 1 shows the data in terms of votes cast. Appendix 2 shows shares of the vote. Colours indicate the party winning the most votes in the area.

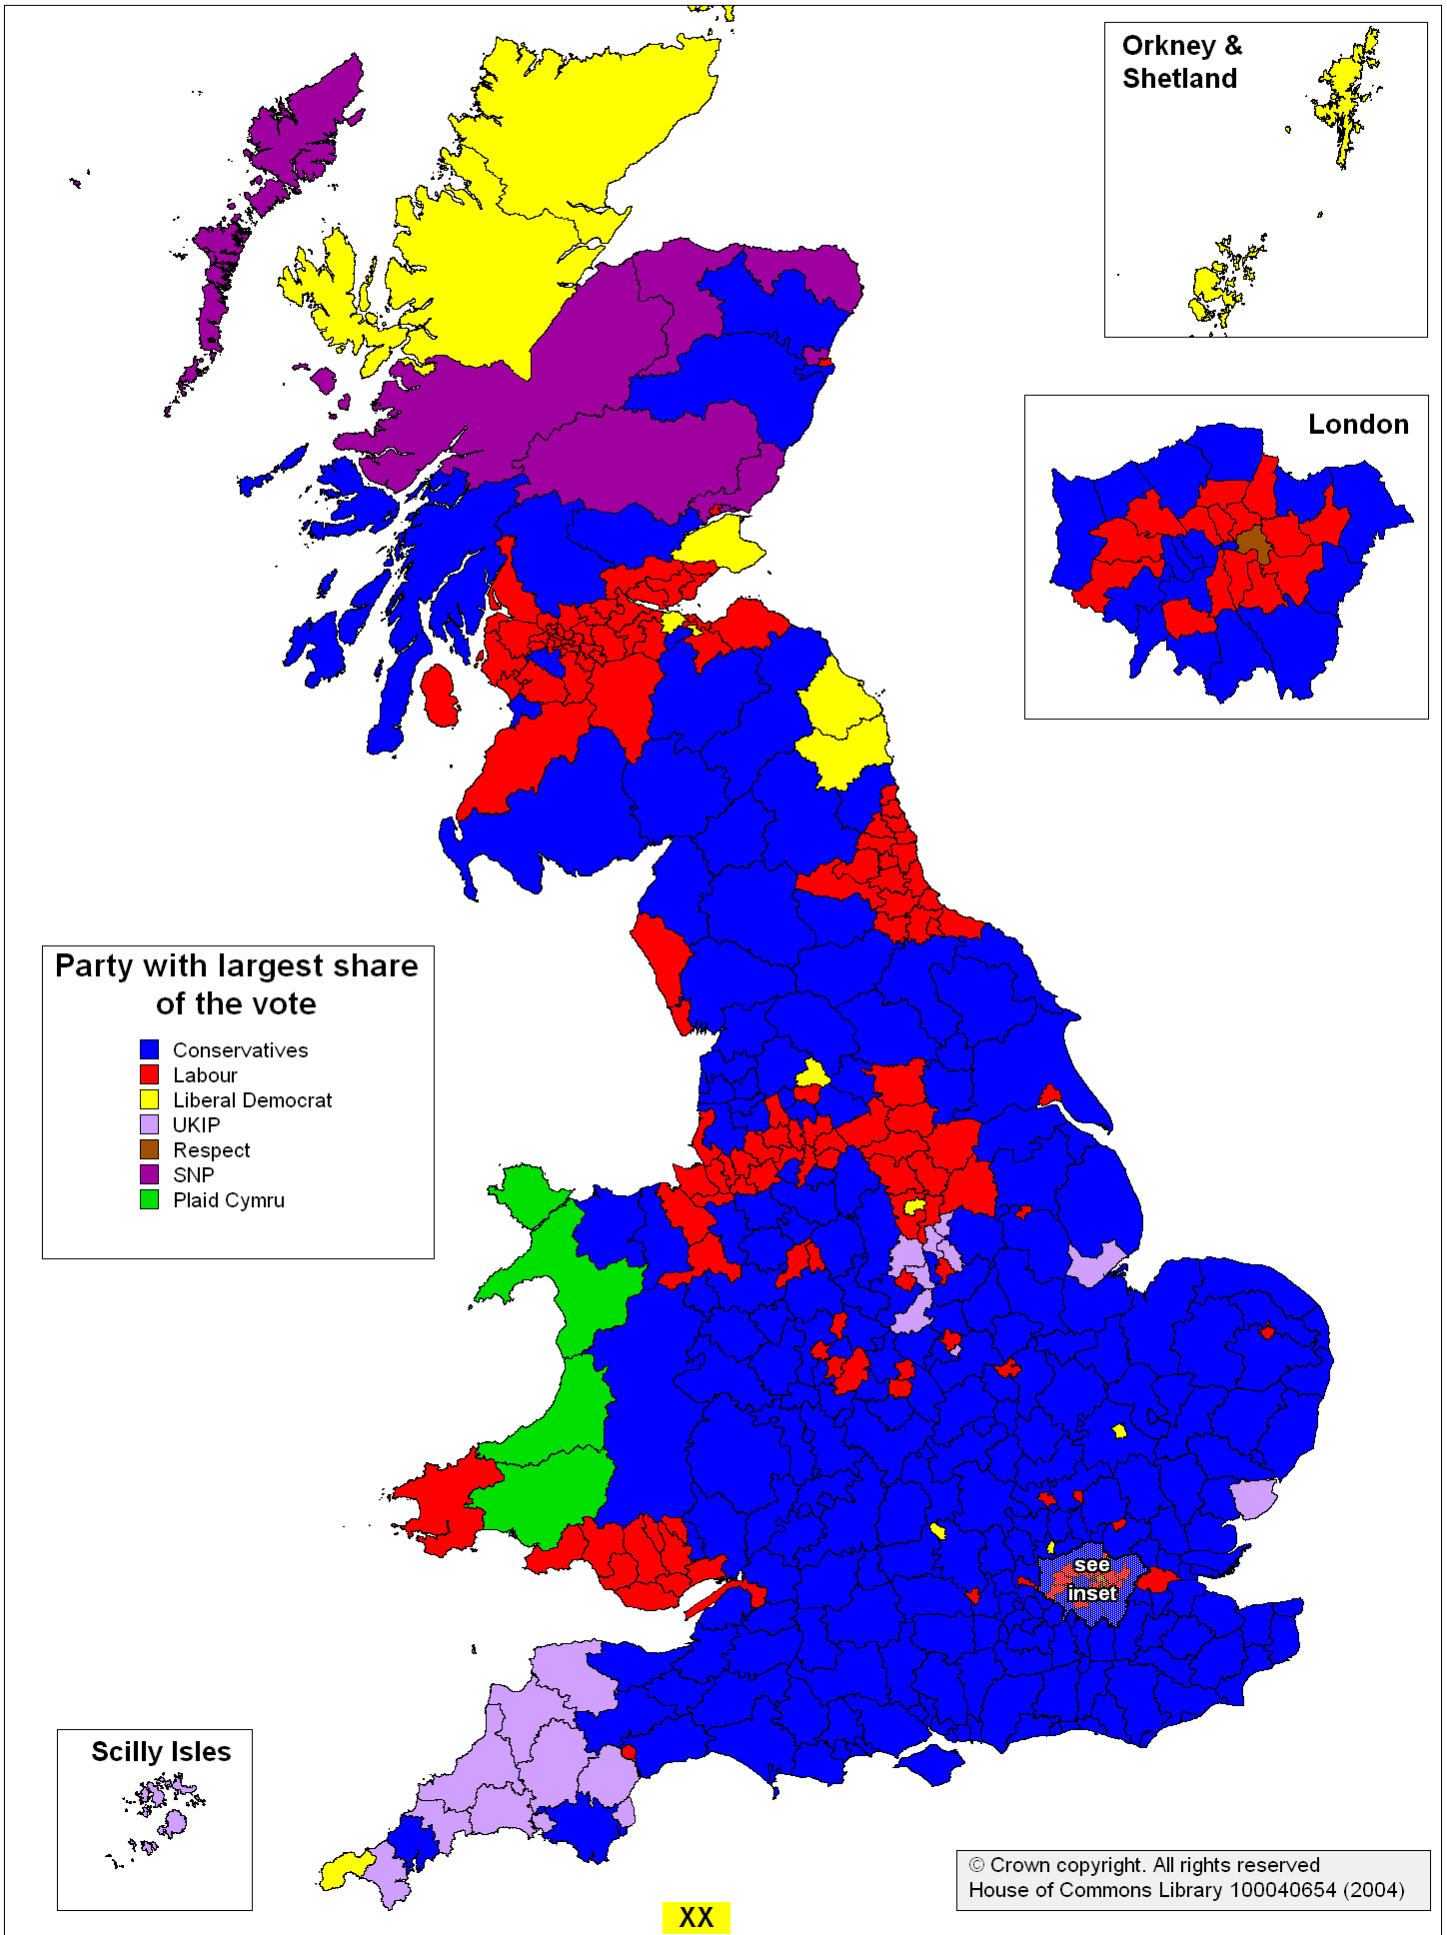

Turning to specific points of note:

- The Conservatives were the largest party in 258 of the 449 local areas. Gibraltar, where they won 70.7 percent, was the only area where they won more than half of the vote.
- That compares to 144 areas where Labour was the largest party. Labour also won more than half the vote in one area, Blaenau Gwent.
- UKIP were the largest party in 20 local authorities in England, including 11 in Devon, Cornwall and the Isles of Scilly. Their largest share of the vote was 37.6 percent, in Boston.
- The Liberal Democrats were the largest party in 14 areas. Their highest shares of the vote were in neighbouring Alnwick and Berwick-upon-Tweed.
- Respect won more votes than any other party in Tower Hamlets, where they had 20.8 percent of the vote. Their share, 21.7 percent, was higher in Newham, where they were second to Labour.
- The Scottish National Party were the largest party in 8 Westminster constituencies in Scotland, equivalent to a net gain of 3 on their 2001 General Election position.
- Plaid Cymru were the largest party in 4 western Welsh unitary authority areas, and won 46.9 percent of the vote in Gwynedd.
- The Green Party won 19.9 percent of the vote in Brighton & Hove, where they came second to the Conservatives. They came second in a further 3 areas, and were third with 19.7 percent in Oxford.
- The British National Party won 16.7 percent of the vote in Burnley, where they were the third largest party. Their next highest shares were in Stoke-on-Trent and Barking & Dagenham.

II Results across the EU

A. Turnout

Turnout in the UK at European Parliament elections has been relatively low by comparison with other European countries.

signifies mandatory voting

(a) The calculation of turnout is based on total votes (valid and rejected) as a proportion of the national electorate. The UK figure may therefore differ from that elsewhere in this paper. The figures presented are those reported by the European Parliament.

More recent or accurate data for electorates gathered from national offices may give slightly different turnout figures.

EU-wide turnout declined further in 2004 to less than 50 percent. In the UK turnout was higher than in any previous European Parliament election. Turnout in the UK still, however, remains low in comparison with other established EU Members, although it is higher than in some of the 10 new member states.

Percentage turnout by country: 2004

B. Seats in the European Parliament

There are 732 Members of the European Parliament. The smallest country, Malta, has 5 MEPs. This increases broadly in line with population, up to the largest, Germany, which has 99. The UK, Italy and France have 78 MEPs each. MEPs generally stand for election as representatives of a national party. However, once in the Parliament they can form political groups which draw members from the delegations of a number of countries. Conservative MEPs, for example, are in the European People’s Party group, and Labour MEPs in the Party of European Socialists.

There are currently seven political groups in the Parliament:

Political Groups in the European Parliament 2004

Before election (inner); after election (outer, provisional)

The EPP increased its proportion of MEPs after the election (outer circle in the above graphic) slightly and the Socialist group decreased. However, this position is subject to change when the Parliament meets in July, especially as the “other” category includes 66 MEPs who may affiliate to groups.

C. Country-level analysis

The following sections summarise the votes and seats for each of the 25 EU Member states. Political groups have been assigned provisionally by the European Parliament. Changes in the number of MEPs by party show the number of MEPs elected in 2004 compared with the hypothetical number in the previous parliament after adjusting for the change in the number of seats.

The data for these tables has been taken from BBC Euro-election analysis, the European Parliament and national election result websites shown under each country.

The opposition Social Democrats performed marginally better than Chancellor Wolfgang Schüssel's conservative People's Party, gaining 1 more seat. More significant, however, were the losses suffered by the far-right Freedom Party. Its share of the vote fell from 23 percent in the last election to 5 percent, losing the party all but 1 of the seats it had previously held. Hans-Peter Martin, an MEP and anti-fraud campaigner who had been expelled from his party for exposing alleged expenses abuses by his European colleagues, headed a list which won 2 seats.

Cyprus joined the EU in May as a divided island, and these elections showed continuing strong support for the rejection of a UN blueprint to reunify it. 4 of the 6 seats were won by parties that rejected the UN plan: 2 by the Communist AKEL party, 1 by the Democratic Party of President Tassos Papadopoulos and 1 by the new For Europe party.

The opposition Civic Democratic Party, which campaigned against giving up too many powers to the EU, were the clear victors of these elections, picking up 9 of the 24 seats. The governing coalition of Prime Minister Vladimir Spidla, whose Social Democratic Party polled 9 percent of the vote, won just 2 seats. Coalition partner the Christian Democrats took 10 percent, also translating into 2 seats. The Freedom Union, the third coalition member, did not win a seat.

Denmark's main opposition party, the Social Democrats won the biggest vote share of any party, well ahead of the Liberals in second place. The result is seen in part as a backlash against the ruling Liberal party's (Venstre) support for the war against Iraq. The party saw its share of the vote decline to 19 percent from 23 percent in 1999.

The main opposition party, the conservative National Coalition Party, took the largest share of the vote with 24 percent, although they remained behind the combined results of the 2 main parties in Finland's centre-left coalition government. The results translate into 3 of Finland's 14 seats in the European Parliament for the Social Democrats, and 4 each for the Centre Party and the National Coalition Party.

The opposition Socialist Party emerged as the clear victors, taking 31 seats. However President Jacques Chirac's conservative UMP and the Union for French Democracy both improved their share of the vote from the 1999 elections. The far-right National Front also improved its standing, coming in fourth with 10 percent, up from 6 percent in 1999.

The ruling Social Democrats suffered their worst poll results since World War II in these elections, with only 22 percent of the vote. The outcome has been attributed to the government's controversial plans for welfare reform. Despite sharing government with the Social Democrats, the Greens do not appear to have been affected by the association, polling 12 percent compared with 6 percent in 1999, and increasing their number by 6 MEPs.

Irish Prime Minister Bertie Ahern's Fianna Fail party lost a seat. Although Fianna Fail had the largest share, 29 percent, of the vote, Fine Gael now has the largest number of MEPs. Sinn Fein won its first ever seats in the European Parliament. One of these is in Ireland, the other in Northern Ireland. The Greens and the former Independent MEP, Dana Rosemary Scallon, failed to be re-elected.

Central Electoral Committee Lithuania: http://www.vrk.lt/rinkimai/2004/euro/rezultatai_e.htm

With just over 30 percent of the vote the centre-left Darbo Partija beat the governing Social Democrats into a distant second place. Lithuanians also voted on the same day to replace impeached President Rolandas Paksas, which could have been a factor in the relatively high turnout of just over 46 percent.

Department of Information, Malta: <http://www.doi.gov.mt/EN/elections/>

The Maltese backed the opposition Labour party, which campaigned against EU membership in the run-up to the country's March 2003 referendum on joining. In this election 48 percent supported the Labour party, while 40 percent backed the governing Nationalists. Malta uses the single transferable vote system for the European Parliament. Proportions here are based on first round votes.

Part I of this Research Paper summarises the results in the UK. Northern Ireland uses the single transferable vote system for electing its 3 MEPs, while the rest of the United Kingdom uses a d'Hondt quota system. Because of the different systems, shares shown above sum to 100% separately for GB and Northern Ireland, where they are based on first-preference votes only.
