SYDNEY

When most people think of Australia, they think of Sydney. The Sydney Opera House and Sydney Harbour Bridge are two of the most recognizable images of the modern world. While Sydney Harbour provides a perfect backdrop to the white 'sails' of the Sydney Opera House, the Opera House itself, with its distinct silhouette, has itself become a symbol of Sydney. This, however, is only one side of the city. Sydney is a place of many layers, like the sandstone upon which it is built. The visitor can explore these layers to gain a deeper understanding of Sydney and its history. They can discover how Sydney grew from a penal colony of several hundred people in 1788, to a modern city of over 4 million people today.

THE CITY

When the First Fleet arrived in Sydney in 1788, Aboriginal people were already living in Australia. Aboriginal settlement in Australia dates back at least 40,000 years. The Aboriginal people who lived in Sydney were proud, self-sufficient people.

Sydney developed as a maritime city and was a very busy port. Today many of the old inner-city wharves have been redeveloped, and places such as the Walsh Bay wharves and Darling Harbour are home to theatres, shops, restaurants and hotels. Historic areas such as the Rocks, Millers Point and Woolloomooloo, which housed the hundreds of workers from the wharves and the docks of Sydney, are now great places for visitors to explore.

Sydney's eastern suburbs are to be found along the southern shores of the harbour and are easily accessible by bus or ferry. Oxford Street, the home of the Gay and Lesbian Mardi Gras, extends from the city to Paddington and there is much to see and do along the way. Nearby, Kings Cross is Australia's most densely populated area. It remains a popular destination for visitors.

Around the northern edges of the harbour there are many interesting places to explore such as Mosman, Manly and - further north - the northern beaches.

In older inner-city suburbs such as Balmain, Paddington and Glebe visitors can see glimpses of Victorian, Edwardian and 1920s architecture hidden among modern buildings, as well as occasional reminders of early colonial times. There are many interesting walks in these areas, with lots of cafés, restaurants and shops along the way. Visitors can explore Sydney harbour and the Parramatta River by ferry, going as far west as historic Parramatta, settled in 1788 - now the demographic centre for the Sydney metropolitan region.

Over the past 25 years, Sydney has become the undisputed financial, media, tourist and political capital of Australia and the site of its most expensive real estate. But it is the bushland and harbour vistas that capture one's attention.

International migration has shaped Sydney more than any other Australian city. Sydney is a metropolis of great cultural diversity. Migrants have enriched almost every aspect of Australian life - from business to the arts, from cooking to comedy and from science to sport. Australians enjoy a huge range of food in restaurants and homes, reflecting the country's cultural diversity.

In 2007, Sydney was voted number one city in the world at the US Condé Nast Traveler Magazine Readers' Choice Awards for a record 12th time. Sydney's world ranking can be largely attributed to the Sydney 2000 Summer Olympics, when the city established its presence on the world stage.

DO & SEE

Sydney's beautiful situation gives a gilt edge to many of the city's sights. For the history enthusiast, of course, the place is a dream from the aborigines' maybe 60,000 year history, to the arrival of the colonists just over 200 years ago.

The red Sydney Explorer buses are a good way to get around in the city and to make sure not to miss any of the sights. The buses visit 27 of Sydney's top attractions and have stops all over the city. You can hop on and off as you please.

The Opera House

Sydney's Opera House at Bennelong Point, is like the USA's Grand Canyon in the way that mere pictures cannot convey its magnificence. Where once there were tram depots, now stands one of the 20th-century's finest structures and Australia's most renowned symbol. It was inaugurated in 1973, after a planned building time of five years turned into 16 years and a budgeted cost of eight million dollars became 102 million. The Opera House comprises five principal auditoria, each holding between 300 and 2700 seats for opera, films, theatre and concerts.

EATING

Thanks to large-scale immigration, all of the world's cuisines are generally represented here. The current "typically" Australian cuisine, Mod Oz, blends fresh raw materials in a fusion of Asian and European culinary styles. And in just a few decades, Australia has earned a place among the world's leading wine-producing countries.

"BYO," Bring Your Own, means that you can take your own wine to a restaurant - even to some that are licensed to serve alcohol.

Altitude

Here you can have the pleasure of eating steamed lobster as you look out over Sydney harbour through five-metre-high windows on the 36th floor of the Hotel Shangri-La. Sober and modern Australian-European gourmet cuisine. Extensive wine list.

BARS & NIGHTLIFE

From old-fashioned pubs to cool cocktail lounges, in Sydney everyone can find a favourite from among the watering holes. But don't order a "pint" at the pub, here a large draught beer is called a "schooner". Jazz clubs, rock clubs and night clubs are to be found in nearly every quarter. But if you want to be certain of finding a really hot dance palace and disco you would be best advised to make for Kings Cross, Darlinghurst and the area along Oxford Street. This is Sydney's traditional entertainment district, while Taylor Square is the heart of gay Sydney.

Bayswater Brasserie

SHOPPING

Sydney offers fantastic shopping opportunities. It doesn't matter what you are looking for, you will find it here. Most shops are open from 9am-5:30pm on weekdays, but on Thursdays you can do evening shopping until 9pm.

Oxford Street

One of the best shopping districts can be found along Oxford Street through Darlinghurst, Paddington and Woollahra. Designer shops, galleries, tattoo parlours, booksellers, furniture shops wall to wall - and an abundance of cafés to boot. On the clothes racks you will find Japanese and Belgian sizes as well as Australian brands like Gary Castles and Nine West. Collette Dinnigan's store is at 33 William Street, and a couple of doors further along, at number 39, there is Belinda Serper's super-cool shoes and bags. The easiest way to get here is by buses 378, 380 and 382 to Paddington Town Hall.

Pitt Street Mall And George Street

Pitt Street Mall right in the centre of the city - at Sydney Tower - leads to several large shopping centres, such as The Strand, Centrepont, Mid-City Centre, Sky Garden and Sydney Central Plaza with the city's largest food court. More shops than you can manage in a week. One passage leads to Queen Victoria Building, an elegant shopping and restaurant mall in a palatial one-time vegetable market dating from 1893, which now houses designer clothes and quality souvenirs. Galleries Victoria, 500 George Street, is one of the newer shopping temples.

Myer & David Jones

Shopping malls and small stores are the mainstay of Sydney's shopping scene, but these two large department stores are holding their own.

Boomalli Aboriginal Artists

The shapes and the colours from aboriginal art are used in every conceivable context as décor and on souvenirs, and original works are sold in many galleries and shops. Boomalli is run by an aboriginal co-operative and sells paintings and books.
