Journals Division

The University of Chicago Press is pleased to announce subscription rates for 2011. Institutional rates for 2011 can be viewed at <http://www.journals.uchicago.edu/> on the Journals Division Homepage. These rates are effective for volumes with 2011 cover dates or the first issue of the volume indicated on the rate list.

Important Publication Changes in 2011

- The University of Chicago Press is pleased to announce that it has entered a publishing partnership with Central Saint Martins College of Art and Design, University of the Arts London; Museum van Hedendaagse Kunst Antwerpen (MuHKA); and arte y pensamiento, Universidad Internacional de Andalucía (UNIA) in publishing Afterall: A Journal of Art, Context, and Enquiry (ISSN: 1465-4253). This partnership began with the summer 2010 issue.

Afterall is dedicated to the faithful representation of contemporary art, providing a forum for in-depth analysis of the context in which the works are produced, seeking to inspire artists to see art as an agency for change. Afterall's academic format differentiates it from popular review magazines. Each issue provides the reader with lengthy, well-researched articles; including notes and bibliographies about a few select contemporary artists; and it often includes several different writers discussing the same artists' work from varied perspectives. The print journal itself is visually rich, with numerous accompanying illustrations.

- The University of Chicago Press announces the launch of HOPOS: The Journal of the International Society for the History of Philosophy of Science (ISSN: 2152-5188). The first issue will publish in spring 2011.

HOPOS will present the highest quality scholarship concerning the history of philosophical discussions about science. The journal provides an outlet for interdisciplinary work that helps to explain the links among philosophy, science, and mathematics, along with the social, economic, and political context. Published twice a year, the journal will feature articles, book reviews, and annually, a review essay of recent scholarship in the field. HOPOS is the official journal of the International Society for the History of Philosophy of Science.

- The University of Chicago Press is pleased to announce that it will publish in association with the Bard Graduate Center (BGC) West 86th: A Journal of Decorative Arts, Design History, and Material Culture (formerly published as Studies in the Decorative Arts; print ISSN: 2153-5531; E-ISSN: 2153-5558). The first issue will publish in spring 2011.

Published biannually on behalf of the Bard Graduate Center (BGC), West 86th reaffirms the BGC's commitment to expanding the conversation regarding the content, meaning, and significance of objects. The journal focuses on the wider crossroads where scholarship in the decorative arts meets design history and material culture studies. West 86th will be available in print and online and will include scholarly articles; review articles; primary source translations; book, catalog, and exhibition reviews; research inquiries; letters to the editor; and supplementary digital material integral to articles.

The University of Chicago Press has entered into an agreement with JSTOR joining its recently announced Current Scholarship Program (CSP) scheduled for launch in January 2011. A brief description of the Current Scholarship Program as well as JSTOR Terms, Conditions and Guidelines for Subscription Agents can be accessed at http://about.jstor.org/sites/default/files/agentfactsheetV2_1_090310.pdf on the JSTOR Website.

As part of the agreement the University of Chicago Press is transferring institutional subscription administration and management to JSTOR for electronic only (E-only) and print + electronic (P+E) subscriptions. Print-only orders for 2011 should be directed to the University of Chicago Press. This change will take effect for any orders that will have start or renewal dates in calendar 2011.

Pricing and Access for the Current Scholarship Program (CSP)

The University of Chicago Press has revised its pricing structure for 2011. Please note the following important changes:

- All electronic subscriptions will be offered at the unlimited access level. The basic access level will no longer be supported in 2011.
- Institutional subscription rates for 2011 are structured according to JSTOR's institutional classification system. The University of Chicago Press's previous classification system will no longer be used.
- Full run subscriptions are offered through JSTOR. Full run subscriptions include current issues in either electronic only format or print + electronic format plus back issues in electronic format extending back to Volume 1, Issue 1.

Institutions that do not have signed site license agreements with JSTOR will have to sign both the license and the rider.

How to Obtain Electronic Access for the Current Scholarship Program (CSP)

See the link noted above to the JSTOR Terms, Conditions and Guidelines for Subscription Agents

Orders submitted to JSTOR (electronic only and print + electronic) or the University of Chicago Press (print-only) at old or other rates will be billed for the additional amount due unless accompanied by a University of Chicago Press or JSTOR order form or promotion code offering a special rate. All rates are for one year unless otherwise specified. Rates are subject to change without notice. We strongly recommend that you confirm both delivery format and institutional classification before processing subscription renewals for 2011.

Orders from these institutions will be billed.

Agency Discount for Print Only Subscriptions

All agency orders for U.S. customers must be at institutional rates. A 5% commission will be allowed to agencies on the Print Only subscription orders for institutions submitted to the Journals Division.

To receive the discount on the Print Only orders, complete end-user information must accompany agency subscription orders. Submitting orders with complete end-user information speeds order entry and improves accuracy.

Shipping

Except where noted, all print copies of our journals are shipped to subscribers outside the United States via Publications Air Service. Shipping within the U.S. is via the U.S. Postal Service.

Renewal Notices on Print Only Subscriptions

No renewal notices are sent to institutions subscribing through agencies prior to receipt of agency orders. After agency orders are received in December, renewal notices for institutions not included with the orders are sent to the institution, not the agency.

Cancellation and Format Adjustments on Print Only Subscriptions

Individual subscription orders may be canceled and the unserved portion refunded to the subscriber. Institutional subscription orders are regarded as final and may not be canceled after the start of the subscription term. Partial refunds will not be given for format adjustments after the subscription has begun.

Individual Subscriptions

Individual rates are applicable only when a subscription is for individual use and when delivery is made directly to the end user. The University of Chicago Press does not accept third-party orders at the individual rate for U.S. customers. All agency orders for U.S. customers must be placed at institutional rates. In cases where an individual residing outside the United States cannot make payment in U.S. funds or via credit card, the Press will accept an agency order at the individual rate.

Single Copies/Back Issues

Additional copies of issues within the current volume are available upon request. Rates for single copies are included in the attached rate list. Back issues are available at a discount for most journals. You can also contact customer service, or visit our Web site at www.journals.uchicago.edu. All single-copy sales are final. No returns or refunds.

Claims on Print Only Subscriptions

Claims requests for replacement copies due to nonreceipt must arrive within three months of publication date or date of order (whichever is later) for U.S orders or within six months of publication date or date of order (whichever is later) for ROW orders. In all other cases the single-copy price will be charged for replacing an issue. Claims requests should be sent to agencyclaims@press.uchicago.edu to assure timely processing.
