

Our Incentive Program

Amazonia Reforestation has a special incentive program. If you buy 4 sets of 10 trees for $400, we will add another 10 trees as a bonus. You will receive a Tree Owner Certificate for 50 trees, which on maturity in 10 years will pay you a return of $1,700. This is an awesome deal that will only be around for a limited time.

If you have already bought some trees we have an incentive program for you to help spread awareness on our behalf. For every $100 worth of trees your friends, business associates or family purchase, we will give you as the referrer 1 bonus tree. That means that for every $1,000 worth of referrals and sales you make, you can earn 10 bonus trees that pay a return of $340 at maturity in ten years time.

Reforestation Woods

There are several types of trees that do well in the soil and weather conditions of the Orinoco river basin.

Our preferred plantation tree is the Acacia mangium. It produces a beautiful, commercially popular hardwood in less than 10 years that is good for furniture, floors, decking and other applications. The tree also produces a fruit that is very high in protein.

Saladillo

A tree that is marketed in Europe, but is almost unknown despite its wood's mahogany like beauty is the Saladillo, also known as the Caraipa llanorum. This hardwood has been used by indigenous people for millennia and by modern campesinos or farmers for a variety of applications, including buildings and furniture.

Other plantation trees we intend to plant include Eucalyptus pellita and Piño caribe or Caribbean pine. The land is also able to support cashew, guava, mango, avocado and other popular fruit trees. Planting some fruit trees is important for sustaining wildlife.

Some other common trees we may grow include the cedar (cedro), the protium (caraño), the laurel (Cordia alliodora), the Brazilian cherry (anime or curbaril), the jacaranda (gualanday), the snakewood (yarumo), the star apple (caimo), the giant bamboo (guadua), the coffee-shade tree (guamo) and the cumaré (Amburana cearensis).
