

State of the Mobile Web, July 2011

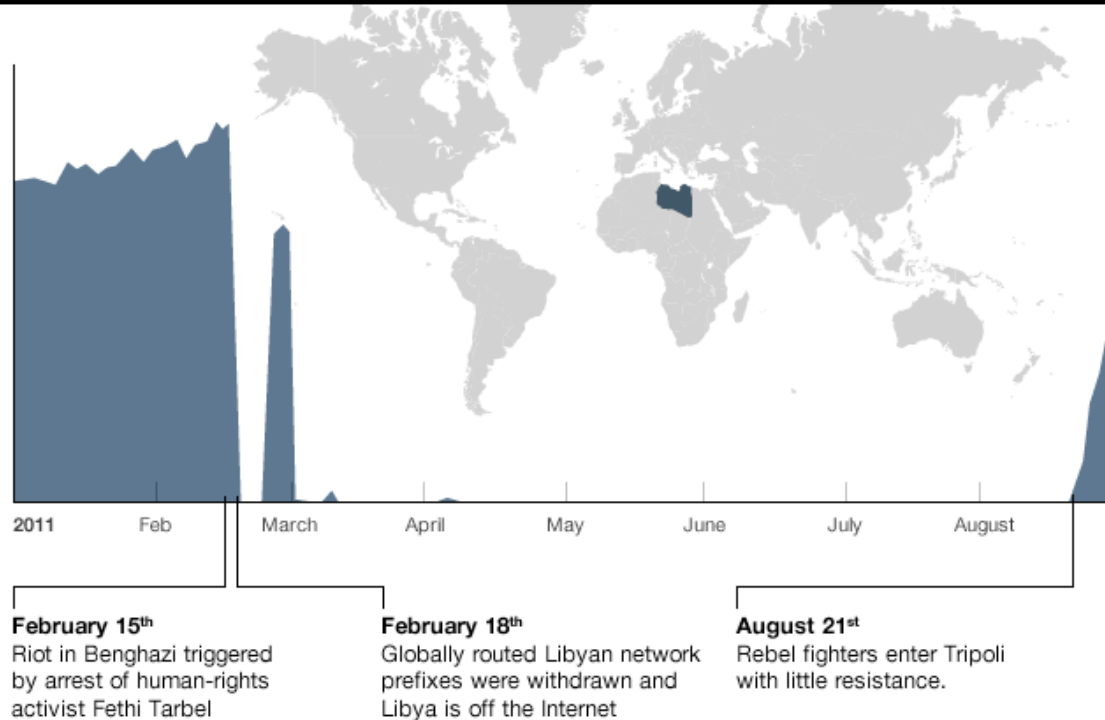

August 30, 2011

Part 1: Libya returns to the Internet

Opera Mini usage worldwide usually grows at a consistent 5% to 10% per month, each month. This month we take a peek into the top 50 countries and highlight some interesting month-on-month changes.

- Libya users, after being practically absent from Opera Mini servers since February 16th, returned to the Opera Mini statistics in August.
- The growth of Libyan Opera Mini users has risen sharply as users discover that the Internet is once again available from their mobile phones.
- A few other interesting anomalies were observed. Usage in the U.S. declined 1%, but page views grew 13% and data transfers rose 11%. Australia saw its user base grow 3%, but page views and data transfers declined.
- The real story in July was Iran. It was one of just two countries in the top 50 that lost users. While we can speculate on government intervention or an operator shutting down Opera Mini access, the numbers are striking. Opera Mini usage in Iran dropped 36% in July. Most of the user loss occurred over five days, from July 4th to July 9th. Iran is no stranger to these quick drops. After reaching new highs, Opera Mini usage drops quickly. On June 14, 2011, Opera Mini reached an all-time high in Iran. The next day, usage plummeted more than 48%.
- Data transfers and page views contracted even more than the user base. Page views declined 55%, with most of the loss coming over those five days. The amount of data Iranians use shrunk by 58%.
