LSSI APPOINTS BRAD KING AS CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER

Industry leader brings global experience in public service outsourcing to continue LSSI's record of innovation in library services

Germantown, MD – Brad King has joined Library Systems & Services, LLC (LSSI) as Chief Executive Officer effective April 11, 2011. Mr. King brings a wealth of expertise in the contract services industry including serving as CEO for North American operations of the Serco Group.

LSSI Executive Chairman Frank Pezzanite remarked, "We are very pleased to have Brad join LSSI at this pivotal time in the company's development. His leadership and extensive experience in the contract services industry will be invaluable to LSSI as we continue to bring innovative solutions to our customers." King added, "LSSI offers a powerful alternative for governments wanting to preserve the vital libraries in their communities, and expand the impact of those libraries during this difficult economic downturn. I am excited and proud to join this impressive team of experienced professionals in their passion to serve the public in partnership with our clients."

With the addition of King as LSSI's new Chief Executive Officer, Frank Pezzanite will remain with the company in the capacity of Executive Chairman.

King received an MBA from Pacific Lutheran University and a BBA from Wichita State University. He currently sits on the Board of Trustees of the Coriell Institute for Medical Research in Camden, NJ.

About LSSI

Founded in 1981, LSSI is the world's premier provider of library operation services and solutions to public and government libraries. LSSI helps communities and institutions improve their library operations and customer service, accomplish more with their library budget, identify and secure additional grants, leverage library automation and technology, and create library programs specific to the needs of the local community.
