

'These essays on grassroots struggles over labour, MDGs, or Kyoto, reveal the workings of a sustaining "meta-industrial" economy. ... By far and away the best collection of ecological feminist writing I have found!

RICHARD NORGAARD

Professor of Energy and Resources, University of California at Berkeley

'The lessons from this outstanding book are clear. Economic and ecological practices conducted by women and other marginalised groupings must be recognised as a source of new theoretical understandings, critical for social and environmental justice to be achieved!

PETER DICKENS

Faculty of Social and Political Sciences, University of Cambridge; author of the award-winning book Society and Nature (2004)

'These new and incisive perspectives put forth a transformative agenda for global justice. And in doing so the collection draws all of us – activists and academics alike – closer to a common political denominator in the search for a true alternative to globalisation!

LIM LI CHING

leading international biodiversity activist, Third World Network, Kuala Lumpur

'In these times of multiple crises and breakdowns, no one-dimensional reductionist framework will show a way out. [This book], inspired by the diversity and pluralism of ecofeminism, is a must read for anyone committed to building alternatives!

VANDANA SHIVA

Director of the Foundation for Science, Technology, and Ecology, New Delhi; author, activist, and winner of the Alternative Nobel Prize

As the twenty-first century faces a crisis of democracy and sustainability, this book brings academics and alternative globalisation activists into conversation.

Through studies of global neoliberalism, ecological debt, climate change, and the ongoing devaluation of reproductive and subsistence labour, these uncompromising essays by internationally distinguished women thinkers expose the limits of current scholarship in political economy, ecological economics, and sustainability science.

With in-depth analyses of climate change, MDGs, financial meltdown, and new theoretical concepts for understanding humanity-nature links, this book is essential reading for students of political economy, ethics, global studies, sociology, women's studies, geography, and sustainability science.

ARIEL SALLEH is a researcher in Political Economy at the University of Sydney, author of Ecofeminism as Politics (1997) and co-editor of the journal Capitalism Nature Socialism. Her work is widely debated in environmental politics and ethics.
