

Twins Linda and Terry Jamison, who predicted 9/11, have a psychic link and believe they are one soul with a mission to help others

Double VISION

We've all heard about the amazing mind links between twins. But imagine if they could harness this natural telepathy and use it to make psychic predictions. Well, that's exactly what Linda and Terry Jamison claim to do.

They work together in their apartment in Los Angeles, California. Seated at either end of their living room, they clutch A4 pads and pens. Closing their eyes and breathing deeply, the twins go into a deep meditation. They then channel their spirit guides, who make their hands glide over the blank pages, crafting words in beautiful medieval-style calligraphy. They write down names, dates and numbers, which come in broken sentences only the twins can decipher. This is known as automatic writing.

As well as making predictions, which simply come to them, the twins also give personal readings to private clients. 'We like to work together and use a two-way phone when we're doing readings so we're on the line at the same time,' says Linda. 'Being twins with a psychic link, we believe we're one soul with a split mission on this plane. There are occasions when I receive premonitions for individuals that Terry doesn't pick up and vice versa, but our skills are definitely heightened when we work together.'

One day in October 2002, the twins used automatic writing, and got shocking results. Washington was being terrorised by a sniper and detectives were desperate to hunt down the people responsible. Ten people had died, and the twins wanted to see if they could help catch the killer.

The twins scribbled down the names 'John' and 'Mohammed' and a place called 'Frederick', and revealed these details on their website and in an American magazine called New Life. Just days later John Allen Muhammad and his accomplice, Lee Boyd Malvo, were arrested. They were tried and sentenced to death and imprisoned for life respectively. The place they were arrested was Frederick County in Maryland, USA.

PREDICTIONS Although the Jamison twins concentrate on giving psychic advice to individuals and businesses, it's their sideline, making predictions, which has brought them fame. Over the years, they've predicted medical breakthroughs, natural disasters and even economic downturns. All their predictions have been either documented in magazines, on their website or through other media. In August 1997, for example, the twins gave a lecture in California and predicted John Kennedy Junior's tragic death in a small plane. Chillingly, this tragedy happened nearly two years later in July 1999.

The twins even claim the CIA employed them two years ago in a counter-intelligence project set up to deal with the Iraq situation. While the CIA refuses to comment on this, there's no doubt the women's psychic abilities have been given credence. The twins regularly appear on the US radio show, Coast To Coast, presented by Art Bell, who has declared them to be 'incredibly talented'.

connected by two bodies. We finished off each other's sentences without thinking – just as we do now. And when we were growing up, we often had the same nightmares, such as being chased by a green dog.

'We're so closely connected we've had the same illnesses since birth. When one of us has a pain, such as toothache, the other has it, too. And we tend to dress alike, even if we don't plan to. We'll often pick out the same clothes in a shop to show each other. People say it's like talking to a mirror image of the same person.'

HOW THEY STARTED

Despite possessing extraordinary abilities, becoming professional psychics was the last thing the twins thought of doing as they planned their careers. Their parents were successful artists and the girls followed in their

'It happened just as you predicted. The World Trade Center has been attacked. They say it was Osama Bin Laden, just as you said'

It all began at a school fête when the twins were five years old. Terry stepped forward to guess how many sweets were in a jar. Holding the container in her hands, she squeezed her eyes shut and said 457. She didn't need to guess. She was spot on.

By the time the twins were at high school, their powers had grown even stronger. While the other girls chatted away about make-up and boys, the twins were predicting the future.

They said a friend of theirs would become a news anchorman, which he later did. And they often told friends which boys they'd date and what marks they could expect in exams.

Linda says, 'We were seen as being a bit weird, and the other students nicknamed us the "Psychic Twins".'

But despite feeling a little isolated during their school years, Linda and Terry still had each other. And the girls were so close they could communicate without talking. 'We hated being apart,' Linda explains. 'Whenever we were away from each other, it felt as though half of me was missing. We were one spirit footsteps by gaining degrees in fine art. In fact, they were able to draw accurate portraits at the age of six.

But their careers took another turn when they decided to found a performing arts company, which put on music, comedy, dance and acrobatics shows in New York and Washington, DC.

In their spare time, the twins learnt to meditate. Then, when the girls were 21, a bizarre experience changed the course of their lives once again.

'I was very relaxed, just sitting in a café and meditating with my sister,' recalls Linda. 'All of a sudden, a spirit took over my sister's body. It was as though her limbs were no longer her own. She had a sudden urge to write information down on a napkin.'

'Then the spirit moved to me. When I opened my mouth to speak, the words tumbled out in a Scottish accent. I remember Terry just staring at me quizzically. We both knew something important was happening. I can't remember exactly what I said, but that was a major step on the journey to reach the place we're at now.'

But the twins wanted to learn more. They joined classes run by a British medium called Nora Shaw, who was working in the US. Then the twins began to file away their predictions for future reference. They also started to give readings.

Linda says, 'People see us in person or we talk on the phone. We do the channelling before the call, but also tune in to our guides and the guides of the person we're about to do a reading for.'

They help with all sorts of requests such as those from women desperate to find out if their husbands are having affairs as well as giving advice about buying houses.

THE TRUTH HURTS

At times, their readings have been so shocking people have slammed down the phone on the twins. They told one client her new husband was having an affair with his stepsister, who was living in their home at the time. The twins also informed the woman her husband was surrounded by dangerous criminals. She hung up. But when the woman rang back a few months later, she told the twins both their predictions had come true and that her husband was now in prison serving time for violent crime.

The twins have also helped people whose children have disappeared. One 55-year-old businessman, whose teenage daughter had run away from boarding school, was desperate to find out whether she was OK. The twins were able to predict where he could find her and that she was well.

Yet, by far, the most shocking event the twins have foreseen was the disaster that occurred in New York on 11 September 2001.

Linda remembers the telephone ringing in their apartment early that morning. Groping for the receiver, she managed a muffled, 'Hello'.

'It's happened... like you predicted,' sobbed a tearful voice, belonging to her friend Susan. She was calling from New York. 'The World Trade Center has been attacked by terrorists,' she said. 'They are saying it's Osama Bin Laden, just as you said.'

Trembling, Linda ran into

'We're so closely connected we've suffered with the same illnesses from birth. If one of us is in pain, the other one suffers, too'

Terry's room to wake her up. The women rushed to switch on the television. Like millions of other people around the globe, they watched in horror as flames belched from the 110-storey buildings and black plumes of smoke curled upwards. They saw the faces of trapped people desperate to escape.

PREDICTING 9/11

'The Twin Towers had been attacked just like we'd said,' says Linda, 'and even now, I hate saying those words. At the time a hundred thoughts whirled through my head: "What if we'd shouted a bit louder; if we'd insisted the government had taken notice of our prediction?"'

'And yet, in my heart I knew the truth. That we would have been written off as complete kooks, and laughed at by officials. Nevertheless we managed to get the information into the public arena as a warning for anyone who would listen.'

The prediction had come through to Linda in 1999 as the twins were preparing to go on the radio show, Coast To Coast.

Linda remembers how it happened. 'I was sitting on the living room sofa and Terry was sitting on the other side of the room. A message came through in capitals, which meant we took special notice of it because normally words come through to us in lower case.'

'I couldn't believe what I was writing: 'WORLD TRADE CENTER ATTACK BY 2002. NYC. BIN LADEN. GOVERNMENT AND FEDERAL BUILDINGS ATTACKED IN WASHINGTON DC. THOUSANDS PERISH.'

Terry and I were shocked when we looked through the notes. She urged me to make it public. Obviously, we hoped we were wrong but thought maybe it could be stopped if someone heard it.'

'So we broadcast this message live on national radio on 2 November 1999. That night, 20 million people tuned in to hear our predictions.'

Perhaps the people who listened to the show felt that the message was too frightening to be true; too depressing a prospect to contemplate at the dawn of a new millennium. So, unfortunately, no one took any notice.

MAKING A CHANGE

Linda says, 'We both believe that the future is not set and that by taking responsibility and acting upon something, you can change events. But it would have needed a massive shift in human consciousness to have stopped 9/11. Sadly, that didn't happen.'

'The scale of the 9/11 tragedy was unbelievable. It still makes us cry now when we think about it. That's the downside of our gift. You try to disassociate yourself from what you see, hear, feel and know as a psychic. It's impossible not to be affected.'

But rest assured, Linda and Terry do not see anything as harrowing happening in the near future, but read on to discover what predictions they've made for the next 12 months.
