connect movements
be the media

Who we are

Anyone who wants to be one of us, pretty much. You, your friends—anyone with a story to tell.

The editorial collective: passionate observers, dedicated photographers, tireless writers, spam killers.

The video crew: trained professionals, gifted amateurs and everyone in between. Want to shoot video but don't know how? That's how we started too—we'll teach you.

The techies: Drupal wizards who work the magical IMC platform. Want to learn how? Join us.

What we do

We are an independent, democratic media outlet dedicated to the passionate, radical and accurate telling of truth. We are not neutral; we report from inside social movements against capitalism, imperialism, and injustice.

Twin Cities Indymedia—aka TCIMC—is an open publishing website, meaning anyone can instantly publish content, so long as it does not violate the site's mission (that's the paragraph above).

As a collective, we also leverage our resources to aid social movements in the Twin Cities and surrounding region: reporting live from the streets at an antiwar demonstration, telling the stories of Minnesota women resisting foreclosure, or providing video evidence to help wrongly-accused activists fight their charges.

Think globally, publish locally

Twin Cities Indymedia is the Minneapolis-St. Paul outlet of the global Independent Media Center (IMC) Network.

Through a decentralized autonomous network, thousands of media activists operate IMCs in dozens of countries on six continents - more than 100 total.

Want to know how to get started?

Publish what you've got! Is your group doing an action? Do you have a well-researched piece of analysis? Is there a union campaign at work? Write it and put it up. Just like it says here >>>

Want to join the collective?

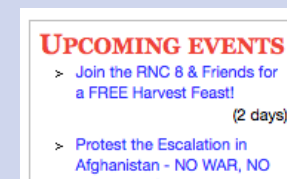

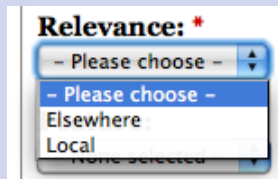

Contact us here
