Deana Carter and Charles Esten perform together on the special episode "Nashville: On the Record 2" Wednesday on ABC.

Sorvino's not done with 'Stalker' yet

BY JAY BOBBIN © Zap2it

Q: I enjoyed seeing Mira Sorvino start her new role on "Stalker," but then the show didn't come back. Will it return? — Steve Prince, Boulder, Colo.

A: Yes, likely in late April. The Oscar-winning actress was signed for a multiple-episode arc on the CBS suspense drama, which left off last month with Beth (Maggie Q) in the clutches of an enemy while Sorvino's character oversaw the mission to find and rescue her.

Starring Patricia Arquette — an Oscar winner herself now — "CSI: Cyber" has been getting its maiden run in the "Stalker" slot on Wednesdays, but its initial episode order is short enough for 'Stalker' to return before the current television season ends.

Q: Now that "Two and a Half Men" is over, what will Jon Cryer be doing? — Jim Gelman, Columbus, Ohio

A: He gave self-effacing responses on the order of, "I honestly don't know," in the months and weeks leading up to the CBS sitcom's finale. We suspect movie work will become the major part of the two-time Emmy winner's menu again, and he actually had gone back to that even before "Men" ended. The same week the show's final season debuted, his comedy film "Hit by Lightning" premiered.

Q: Why has Adam Lambert never appeared on "Saturday Night Live"? — Judy Colby, Buffalo, N.Y.

A: Well ... since we don't book the show, we can't give a definitive answer, but we can speculate on some possible reasons. You'll note that many of the NBC show's musical guests are booked in tandem with the albums' release dates; it's possible that in Lambert's case, other bookings had been made or the show was in repeats or schedules didn't mesh.

And that doesn't apply only to Lambert. As great a showcase as "SNL" for someone who wants to promote an album, sometimes, it just doesn't work out.

Q: I'm looking forward to the new movie version of "The Man From U.N.C.L.E." Weren't there movies with the cast of the original series? — George Meadows, Antioch, Calif.

A: Those "movies" actually were re-edited episodes of the series, sometimes with material added for the theatrical versions. Each television story was titled "The (Something-or-Other) Affair" ... so what played in theaters as "To Trap a Spy" had aired on TV as the show's pilot, "The Vulcan Affair," and what was "The Double Affair" on the small screen became "The Spy With My Face" on the big screen.

"One Spy Too Many," "One of Our Spies Is Missing," "The Spy in the Green Hat," "The Karate Killers," "The Helicopter Spies" and "How to Steal the World" were the titles of the other Robert Vaughn-David McCallum television teamings once they made their way to theater screens. The 1960s "Man From U.N.C.L.E." currently is being shown Sundays on Me-TV.

Criminal Minds

Although the jittery young intruders kept firing their guns, store staff and shoppers somehow were able to keep their wits to avoid injury.

Fans of “Highlander: The Series” may be the target audience of this muddled 2014 disaster movie, which stars that TV show’s leading man, Adrian Paul. He
