Location: Melbourne Room 2

Three decades have passed since the HIV epidemic first surfaced and despite some extraordinary progress in the rollout of antiretroviral treatment to some 10 million people over the past 15 years, progress in the developing world is still insufficient. According to UNAIDS, of the top 20 AIDS affected countries in the world today 19 are still in Africa. Seventy two percent of all people living with HIV live in sub-Saharan Africa, yet this region contains just over 12 percent of the world's population. In this conversation style Q & A session, Sir Bob Geldof, drawing on his own experiences will reflect on some of the challenges still facing scientists, doctors, bureaucrats, donors and others working in stepping up the HIV response for those living in the developing world
