Award-winning property app just got better

Wednesday, 26 September 2012: Domain's leading property app for iPads has had new features added to its already comprehensive suite of tools, making the award-winning app even better for homebuyers.

With the iPad app, property seekers can already search for thousands of properties Australia-wide while being able to view photo galleries, inspection times, auction details, plus phone or email agents directly.

New features added include the ability to compare five different properties and their features such as size and number of bedrooms against each other side by side.

Other upgrades include being able to plot important points of interest on the map, and the addition of the Inspection Buddy tool, which allows users to view property information without closing the inspection planner map, as well as a function to rate and record your personal satisfaction score with a property.

"The upgrades to the iPad app means it is even easier for homebuyers to search for the properties available in the market as well as organise inspection lists and record their favourites," said Matt Siddons, Marketing Director, real estate for Fairfax Marketplaces.

"The iPad app really is an essential tool to use when out and about at open houses on the weekend, and when researching what properties to inspect during the week," said Mr Siddons.

Domain's iPad app has received a number of awards including the Best Classified award at the Australian Interactive Media Industry Association Awards, and named one of the 25 best free Australian iPad apps in the Lifestyle section of all time by Apple.
