SOUTH AFRICA

The South African Defence Industry (SADI) comprises of companies in the public and private sectors, which provide products and services to security forces, thus forming one of the key strategic industrial sectors of the South African economy.

The profile of the industry has evolved and today the SADI is a non-aligned world-class industry that supplies equipment and services to the global original equipment manufacturers in aerospace, maritime and landwards. Characterised by engineering ingenuity, technological innovativeness, affordability, reliability and cost effectiveness, the SADI is a partner of choice for many who seek state of the art defence equipment, including multilateral organisations that are involved in peacekeeping operations, as well as countries seeking to equip their defence establishments.

It is through participation in shows like DSEI that the SADI can gain necessary exposure to competing global players and best practice standards in the defence arena, which provide an opportunity for further growth.
