

Warcry to is International Women's Day

Women's Demands

The International Women's Day is not only coincided with the gigantic task of combatting the vicious capitalist system that marks the rapid decline of world capitalism. It is very important for the world's proletarian class, as it is the day of working women. The warring array of formal organizations, the various groups and increased exploitation of the workers in all industry, have raised the class struggle to an unprecedented height. In the United States, the workers took a more highly organized line than ever before. The demand was not as yet made on an international scale. It was believed that it was better to have the matter as a woman's matter in the hands of the women themselves. The demand was not as yet made on an international scale. It was believed that it was better to have the matter as a woman's matter in the hands of the women themselves.

Women's History

On March 11, 1931, we celebrate the 21st anniversary of a day which was set aside in honor of the development of the labor movement. The International Women's Day had its origin in the early movement to be known as the "National Day of Women." It was a day when women workers in all countries were to be remembered for their part in the struggle for the rights of the working class. The demand was not as yet made on an international scale. It was believed that it was better to have the matter as a woman's matter in the hands of the women themselves.

International Women's Day: Our Task

There are two her places with the men in overthrowing Capitalism and Democracy and in establishing the rule of the workers. It is "All Power to the Workers!" The first act of the Revolution was to give the workers the right to elect their own representatives to the State.
