

Privacy in the Modern Age: The Search for Solutions

Edited by Marc Rotenberg, Julia Horwitz, Jeramie Scott

"Inspired recommendations to help ensure our right to privacy remains a time-honored value in our interconnected world."—
Senator Edward J. Markey

"Original insights into the most critical privacy, data protection, and surveillance concerns of our time."—Anita Allen

"A fascinating overview of current challenges to our privacy and how best to counter them."—Peter Hustinx

"EPIC has become one of America's most vigilant and respected defenders of privacy in the modern age. This invaluable collection of essays shows why."—Jeffrey Rosen

"The Electronic Privacy Information Center is on the front lines of the most important civil liberties issues of our age."—Bruce Schneier

The threats to privacy are well known: the National Security Agency tracks our phone calls, Google records where we go online and how we set our thermostats, Facebook changes our privacy settings when it wishes, Target gets hacked and loses control of our credit card information, our medical records are available for sale to strangers, our children are fingerprinted and their every test score saved for posterity, and small robots patrol our schoolyards while drones may soon fill our skies.

The contributors to this anthology don't simply describe these problems or warn about the loss of privacy—they propose solutions. They look closely at business practices, public policy, and technology design and ask, "Should this continue? Is there a better approach?" They take seriously the dictum of Thomas Edison: "What one creates with his hand, he should control with his head." It's a new approach to the privacy debate, one that assumes privacy is worth protecting, that there are solutions to be found, and that the future is not yet known. This volume will be an essential reference for policy makers and researchers, journalists and scholars, and others looking for answers to one of the biggest challenges of our modern day. The premise is clear: there's a problem—let's find a solution.
