

LAW360 RSS FEEDS

Law360 provides RSS feeds for all of its news content. These feeds provide a live stream of published news articles, and articles will appear in the RSS feed at the same time they appear on the Law360 website.

When a Law360 RSS feed is added to an RSS reader, newly published headlines and summaries will appear in the reader whenever the feed is refreshed. (Refresh frequency is set by the RSS reader, not Law360.)

The first step in setting up an RSS feed is figuring out what content you want to import a feed for.

RSS feeds can be broad or narrow. For example, you can set up a feed for all Law360 news, or for a very specific search. Most often, users set up feeds for individual sections.

To set up an RSS feed for all news headlines/summaries:

1. Go to www.law360.com.
2. Click on the magnifying glass in the empty search box, which performs a search for all of our content.
3. On the search results page, click News & Expert Analysis in the left sidebar or More Results below the preview list of news articles.
4. On the next page, click  at the top right, above the news search results.
5. Copy the URL from the RSS page, and enter it into your RSS reader.

RSS Feeds for Custom Searches

You can set up an RSS feed for any search query, as well. Instead of performing a blank search as described above, enter your specific query into the search box at the top of the website, then follow steps 3 through 5 above.

For more information on customized searches on the Law360 website, please see the Law360 Advanced Search Guide.

India Enters The 'Pay-For-Delay' Fray

India's newly proactive competition authority has begun scrutinizing and investigating pharmaceutical patent settlement agreements between brand and generic firms for potential anti-competitive effects, and its analysis of such agreements is likely to parallel the enforcement policies in the United States, say attorneys with Wilson Sonsini Goodrich & Rosati P.C.

The Fee-Shifting Climate After Octane And Highmark

Two U.S. Supreme Court cases -- Octane Fitness v. Icon Health & Fitness and Highmark v. Allstate Health Management Systems -- have loosened the requirements for fee-shifting awards in patent cases, but as certain decisions show, an award of attorneys' fees is far from automatic, say Russell Coss and Kimberly Farbotto of Sidley Austin LLP.
