A LESSON IN DISCRIMINATION – 10 YEARS LATER ENQUÊTE

In 2006, a Grade 3 teacher in Quebec subjected her students to a “lesson in discrimination,” in the hope that experiencing it would help them understand the distress of students who are ostracized because they are different. The resulting documentary stunned television viewers at home and around the world.

Today, the children are grown and from their new perspectives as young adults, they take another look at The Lesson. Why did some of them reject the privileges that their classmates so enthusiastically accepted? And most important: does one ever truly heal after enduring abuse as a punching bag for fellow students?
