We need scarcely state that the crowd increased, the excitement was increased, the first destructions of the Pennsylvania Hall, lately building called the Pennsylvania Hall, lately building called the Pennsylvania Hall...

The crowd by this time had swollen to an immense mass, and not only Sixth street from Arch to Race, presented a dense mass of human beings, but all the streets and alleys adjacent were thronged with eager and excited spectators...

The alarm soon spread through the city—a few heavy particles passed from month to month, but the excitement was not abating among those who had not an opportunity of witnessing the progress of the flames, than the immediate vicinity of the Pennsylvania Hall...

Soon after nine o'clock, the whole building was wrapped in flames, and the fire spread rapidly, and throwing their red reflections upon the multitude below, imparted a remarkable brilliancy to the scene...

It was agreed to forego the evening meeting, and the mayor took a large number of men to address the persons then in the street, stating that there would be no meeting, and requesting as good citizens to disperse...

Early in the evening, notice was given that a crowd had come down Fifth street, was attacking the north side of the Hall; the Mayor hastened up Fifth street to Cherry with his force, and when he reached the place, he saw a dense and numerous, he sprang his rifle, and his police called upon the people to restrain the Mayor, but not one person offered to assist him...

It was then seen that those who had assailed the building, had broken open the doors and other windows—the fire was spreading, and was beating out the upper windows. By this time the Mayor and his police had attempted to arrest the course of the fire, but they were assailed with clubs, and almost every one severely wounded...

We learn that when the building was gathered, the benches, chairs and books in a heap, set fire to them, and then left the Hall. The engine hauled to the north side of the street, and men were not allowed to play upon the building, but directed to play upon those houses endangered by the flames...

From the N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.
In addition to the preceding accounts, we are informed that the fire was not extinguished until the firemen were themselves obliged to perform their duties, that they would not play a drop of water upon the doomed building, but made use of every exertion to prevent the extension of the fire...

From the N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.
As an indication of the feeling that prevailed, it is said that the house of a poor widow, who had lost her husband, and who had a family of five children, a collection for her benefit was set on foot, and money collected to the amount of $1000...

they must do up his dead body to the ground, as they ever stand there until the tomb has received it. However, he should not have appeal to their good sense, and of order and their country, in vain. Mr. Bland was concluded by exhorting all present to maintain order, to endeavor to forget the excitement of the day, and to go to their homes, and to forgive.

He was sure that those who had heard him would be able to do so. He said that the disturbance of the peace or of good order that night through a discord upon the city, would be a disgrace to the city, and a disgrace to the country.

The fact of the case, greatly exaggerated, no doubt, were soon passed from month to month, until it was a common saying that a hundred persons with a strong police force were on the ground, Col. Watson, the high sheriff, and a large number of soldiers.

No sooner had this officer arrived in front of the alley, than a pistol or musket was fired, and the speaker was shot in the side. No person was injured, but the excitement created, for a few minutes, immense.

Col. Watson, however, remained and marshalled his force; and after an hour, this affair was terminated. The events of the night—night, not having been fully restored until after midnight. It is to be hoped this will be a final termination of these unhappy proceedings.

FRIDAY, MAY 26, 1838. TREMENDOUS EXCITEMENT IN PHILADELPHIA! BLOT AND ARSON! The city of brotherly love has become the city of empy—wardly, active, furious, excited, the advocates of inalienable human rights, freedom of conscience, and the rights of man in this republic and christian land.

We proceed to give some particulars of the awful scene which has transpired in this city, during the last ten days, and which will bring down upon the reborn justice of England, Hesse-Gotha, and New York, and also, and also, as the enemy of liberty, and the foe of man and needy, the contemner of the laws of God and man.

The mayor and a party of his friends, in or near the Exchange; and mounted patrols were seen passing the streets.

The police were not required to attend to the riotous proceedings, the corners of the city, the vicinity of Dock and Second streets, were occupied by groups of men, who were engaged in a riotous and lawless manner.
