

Revolution in Haiti. ... And whereas, the public, having been put in peril by such a state of things, the people, desiring of a reform which they have so many times sought in vain by their legitimate organs, are compelled to take up arms to revoke the constitutional compact which they had consented, and renounce the exercise of their sovereignty.

And whereas, all those who have co-operated in the acts of usurpation and tyranny of President Boyer, or who, by dilatory action or perfidious counsels, have seconded his despotic measures, whether as public functionaries, or as executors of his orders, ought to be deemed his accomplices.
THEREFORE, it is ordered and declared as follows:
ARTICLE I. General Jean Pierre Boyer has forfeited the office of President of Haiti, being guilty of High Treason.

ARTICLE II. Joseph Balzacq, General of Division and Secretary General; Alexis Beaumont Argouin, ex-Senator; Charles Caligny Ardouin, Administrator of the Arrondissement Des Cayes; Jean, Jacques St. Victor Poil, General of Brigade and Commandant of the Arrondissement de Port-au-Prince; Jerome Maximilien Borgella, General of Division, Commandant of the Arrondissement des Cayes, and for the time being of the South; Jean Baptiste Riche, General of Brigade; Louis Mesmin Segny Villevalais, Senator; are accused as accomplices of President Boyer, and traitors to the country.

And whereas, the public, having been put in peril by such a state of things, the people, desiring of a reform which they have so many times sought in vain by their legitimate organs, are compelled to take up arms to revoke the constitutional compact which they had consented, and renounce the exercise of their sovereignty.

POETRY.

THE MODERN HEIR OF LINN.

My son, may God be with you, for I must now depart;
Then hear my dying counsels, and I bid thee to your heart;

They left their humble dwelling, beneath the forest tall;
They left the lonely mountain, for Wellborn's ancient hall;

CHRISTIAN REFORM.

A Voluntary Political Government.

Many readers, probably, will think that so long a note as my last was not useful to prove the positions claimed in it.

But as respects the collective body of towns, or that association which forms the State, a different course of reasoning may be considered necessary.

In order that we may meet the question fairly, and see, step by step, what is the value, if any, which the present political machinery can boast, we should wish fairness traced throughout.

It is not to be denied, that men of considerable talent are chosen, as well as many of moral integrity; but it is admitted every where in private, that we shall in vain seek progressive and wisely inspired souls in legislative halls.

Let us suppose all the unworthy and unpleasant processes of election to be passed. The men are fairly chosen. In due time, they are collected in the metropolis, and proceed to business.

But these, it may be said, are accidental evils, and not necessarily parts of the system. They have, however, clung so closely to representation ever since parliaments were invented, that it is pretty evident they are essentially vices in the representative plan.

jects of a moral character being out of its reach and cognizance. I say commerce seems to be really the sole purpose in foreign negotiations; for the maintenance of peace, or the carrying on of war, is subordinate to commerce.

My feeling upon the subject of these so-called improvements is, that they are no real advantage to human welfare. I see that if science could enable us, in one month, to compass all the sea and land on the globe, we should compass no more virtue or happiness.

I have not, in this letter, met objections on the highest moral ground, because the remarks are so common that such a position is a mere abstraction, and might do very well for a condition of man altogether different from the present, but does not suit the case.

The New-York Herald contains a letter from a respectable source, dated Havana, 30th March, giving the particulars relative to the recent insurrection at Cardenas, by which it appears to have been but a small affair.

Of the night of the 26th and 27th instant, the slaves revolted, belonging chiefly to the plantation of Capt. Penalar, and numbering about one hundred of both sexes, in the district of Cinarones, seventeen leagues from Matanzas; they sallied out at the sound of two drums, which served them for their dances, and proceeded to the plantation called Louisa, the slaves whereof joining them, as did also shortly afterwards the laboring slaves employed on the Cardenas rail-road, constituting altogether, without exaggeration, about three hundred men and females, all armed with machetes (hatchets for cutting cane) and clubs.

Emigration.—Letters from Europe announce the latest emigration to this country, the present season, that has ever occurred since the war. From England, whole communities in the north and west are preparing to embark, principally mechanics and farmers.

Mohammedan and Christian Slavery.—Sir J. Malcolm, in his interesting Sketches of Persia, says: Slaves in the Mohammedan countries are only liable, for any crimes they may commit, to half the punishment to which the freemen would be subject. The law proceeds on the ground of their not being supposed on a par, as to knowledge or reason, with other parts of the community.
