Connecticut's state legislature is known as the General Assembly. It consists of the Senate and the House of Representatives. In accordance with the Constitution adopted in 1965, senators and representatives are elected for two-year terms from single member districts of substantially equal population. The House and Senate meet at the State Capitol in Hartford. General Assembly committees meet and hold hearings in the adjoining Legislative Office Building (LOB).

SESSIONS

REGULAR SESSIONS

Odd-numbered years: Sessions begin on the Wednesday following the first Monday in January and adjourn not later than the first Wednesday following the first Monday in June. The 2015 session runs from January 7 to June 3.

Even-numbered years: Sessions begin on the Wednesday following the first Monday in February and adjourn not later than the first Wednesday following the first Monday in May. Even-numbered year sessions are limited to budgetary, revenue, and financial matters; bills and resolutions raised by General Assembly committees; and matters the speaker of the House of Representatives and president pro tempore of the Senate certify in writing as emergencies. The 2016 session runs from February 3 to May 4.

SPECIAL SESSIONS: The Governor or a majority of the members of each house may call a special session of the General Assembly.

VETO OR "TRAILER" SESSION: If the governor vetoes any bills after a regular or special session ends, the Secretary of the State calls a legislative session for the sole purpose of considering whether to override the veto.

MEMBERSHIP

THE SENATE: The Senate has 36 members. (The Constitution provides for a Senate of between 30 and 50 members.) Its political party composition is 21 Democrats, 15 Republicans.

THE HOUSE: The House has 151 members. (The Constitution provides for a House of Representatives of between 125 and 225 members.) Its political party composition is 87 Democrats and 64 Republicans.

TERM OF OFFICE: Two years.

ELECTED: In November of even-numbered years.

ANNUAL SALARY OF RANK AND FILE LEGISLATORS: $28,000 plus $5,500 expenses for senators and $4,500 for representatives, plus a 57.5 cents-per-mile travel allowance.

All committees of the General Assembly are joint committees composed of both senators and representatives. For 2015-2016, there are 27 committees, 25 of which draft, review and report bills and resolutions. Three committees (Internship, Program Review and Investigations, and Regulation Review) have equal numbers of members from each political party and special responsibilities. Committees function regardless of whether the General Assembly is in session. Most occupy offices and use hearing rooms in the LOB. The committees, their chairmen, and office locations are:

SESSIONAL COMMITTEE MEETING SCHEDULE

The Standing Committees are divided into two groups, "A" and "B". From the start of the session, committees may meet on any day through January 16 in 2013 and February 7 in 2014. From January 17 in 2013, and February 10 in 2014, and continuing until the reporting out date as provided in the Joint Rules, the following "A" committees may meet only on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays: Education; Environment; Government Administration and Elections; Judiciary*; Planning and Development; Public Health; and Transportation; the following "B" committees may meet only on Tuesdays and Thursdays: Aging, Banks, Commerce, Energy and Technology, General Law, Higher Education and Employment Advancement, Housing, Human Services, Insurance and Real Estate, Labor and Public Employees, and Public Safety and Security; Children, and Veterans' Affairs. The "A" committees, Appropriations; and Finance, Revenue and Bonding; and the Statutory Committees, Executive and Legislative Nominations; Legislative Management; Program Review and Investigations; and Regulation Review, may meet on any weekday. *Notwithstanding the meeting restriction, prior to these dates, the Judiciary Committee may meet on any weekday after April 3 in 2013, and after March 19 in 2014. The Speaker of the House of Representatives and President Pro Tempore of the Senate or their designees may grant special exceptions to these rules. Committees may meet on any day during the interim between the 2013 and 2014 regular sessions and after the 2014 regular session.

HOW TO READ A BILL

When a bill is introduced, it is given a number by which it is identified throughout the session. Senate bills are numbered from 1 through 5,000. House bills are numbered from 5,001 through 9,999. A bill reported to the House or Senate floor is also given file and calendar numbers.

A bill contains the name of the sponsor(s) or committee of introduction, a brief but comprehensive title (which may be changed if amendments alter its substance), the sections of proposed legislation and their effective date(s), and a brief explanation of its purpose.

Most bills amend sections of existing law. New language is underlined and language to be deleted is placed between brackets. To understand a bill, one should read the old language with the new language, skipping over any language between brackets. If a section of a bill is all new language, it is not underlined, and the new language is preceded by the word "NEW."

LEGISLATIVE TOOLS

Data Retrieval Service – Computers can provide the current status of bills. The computer service can locate a bill by number, subject, or sponsor. Computers are located in the Information Room in the Capitol basement (Vault 5) and in the State Library's legislative reference section. The Connecticut General Assembly also welcomes you to visit the State of Connecticut Legislative Internet home page www.cga.ct.gov which provides the same information.

Legislative Publications - Available at Bill and Document Room in the LOB, Room 1400 and online:

Proposed Bills, Resolutions, Joint Resolutions - Also available from Senators and Representatives.

Bulletin - List of committees and dates and places for hearings and meetings. Issued daily during legislative sessions.

Connecticut Legislative Guide - Roll; committees; staff; and rules, regulations and guidelines of General Assembly.

Legislative Record Index - Post-session compilation showing history of bills and resolutions.

Senate and House Calendars - List of committee reports, bills, and resolutions ready for action. Issued on legislative days.

Senate and House Journals - Summary of floor action during previous legislative day. Issued on legislative days.

Committee Action List - Summary of committee actions on bills.

Bill List - List of bills introduced for a first reading and referred to committees each day.

HOW A BILL BECOMES A LAW

INTRODUCTION

Proposed Bills

Before the session opens, and for a limited time after opening day, General Assembly members may file proposed bills and resolutions in the house to which they were elected. Proposals may reflect legislators' special concerns or be introduced at the request of constituents, organizations, executive department heads, or other government agencies. Proposed bills are not written in full statutory language but instead state their purpose briefly in plain language. Bills drafted in formal statutory language may be introduced only by committees or by the leaders of the governor's party in the General Assembly at the governor's request.

Senators and representatives may sponsor bills jointly and may "sign on" as co-sponsors of bills originating in either house by asking the clerk of the appropriate house to add their names as sponsors.

Types of Legislation

Most bills, if passed, become public acts, which are laws of general application codified in the Connecticut General Statutes. Bills dealing with individual towns, corporations, or special districts, or that impose requirements for a limited time become special acts.

Resolutions express the General Assembly's sentiments but are not laws and do not have to be signed by the governor. They are used for such purposes as confirming nominations, approving state employee collective bargaining agreements, approving settlements of claims against the state, extending congratulations or sympathy, making appointments, expressing opinions about national or international affairs, and adopting session rules. A Senate or House resolution (SR or HR) requires action by the house of origin only. A Senate or House joint resolution (SJR or HJR) requires action by both houses. A proposed constitutional amendment is introduced as a joint resolution (SJR or HJR) and follows the same procedure as a bill except for voting requirements.

COMMITTEE ACTION

Bill Drafts and Hearings

Each committee considers the proposed bills referred to it and orders full drafts in formal statutory language of those it decides merit further consideration. Committees can also decide to hold "subject matter hearings" on proposed bills without having them fully drafted. A committee may also "raise" bills on subjects within its jurisdiction for public hearing. Committee bills (fully drafted bills based on proposed bills) and raised bills (fully drafted bills introduced by a committee that are not based on a proposed bill) are drafted by attorneys in the Legislative Commissioners' Office (LCO) and returned to the committee for consideration. The committee holds hearings to give the public an opportunity to express views on bills. Legislators, state agency officials and municipal chief elected officials are allowed to testify during the first hour of a public hearing. Members who get signatures from a specified number of House or Senate members can petition a committee to draft a proposed bill and schedule it for a public hearing in cases where a committee has chosen not to do so.

Committee Reports

After the committee has considered a bill, it may (1) issue no report, in which case the bill fails; (2) issue an unfavorable report; or (3) issue a joint favorable (JF) report. When a committee votes to report a bill or resolution favorably, it is submitted to LCO, which has 10 days to check it for constitutionality, general accuracy, and consistency with existing statutes and to correct references and phraseology. LCO then refers the bill to the offices of Legislative Research and Fiscal Analysis, which have five days to prepare, respectively, a plain-language explanation of its legal effect ("bill analysis") and a statement of its fiscal impact ("fiscal note"). LCO must transmit the bill, bill analysis, and fiscal note (together called a "file") to the house of origin within 15 calendar days after first receiving it, unless the speaker and the president pro tempore grant an extension.

Referrals

Frequently, bills receive favorable reports from two or more committees before they are ready for action by the House and Senate. For example, bills requiring appropriations must be referred to the Appropriations Committee; those with penalties to the Judiciary Committee; those affecting revenues, taxes, bonds, and fees to the Finance, Revenue and Bonding Committee; and those changing state government organization to the Government Administration and Elections Committee. If the committee of origin does not refer a bill directly to another committee with some jurisdiction over its subject, the full House or Senate may do so.

Bills Not Acted On in Committee

If a committee does not JF a bill, it may nevertheless be required to report it out by (1) the speaker and the president pro tempore certifying the need for action (emergency certification) or (2) a majority of the members of either house petitioning the committee for a report and filing the petition with the clerk within a specified time. Petitioned bills are considered unfavorable reports unless the committee receiving the petition meets to vote to JF it.

SENATE AND HOUSE ACTION

Files and Calendars

Each favorably reported bill, with its bill analysis and fiscal note, receives a file number and is placed on the calendar in its house of origin in the order that the clerks receive it from LCO.

If the bill is not expected to be controversial, the majority and minority leaders can place it on the consent calendar. Bills on the consent calendar can be passed as a group without discussion. Any member may object to any consent calendar bill and ask for it to be returned to the regular calendar for a full debate and separate vote at the proper time.

A bill can be passed even if it is not printed and in the members' files if the speaker and the president pro tempore certify in writing that an immediate vote is necessary. But members must still have a copy of the bill and a fiscal note on their desks before the vote.

General Debate and Voting

General debate and action on a bill is in order on the third day after the bill has been printed for the files and on the calendar for two session days. In general, a simple majority of those present can pass a bill or adopt an amendment. But the law requires a super-majority to pass a constitutional amendment, a plan to redistrict the General Assembly, a constitutional convention bill, a bill to exceed or amend the definition of the state's constitutional spending cap, or to reject an arbitration award resolving a state employee contract impasse. Final votes to pass or reject a bill must be taken by roll call. Members' votes are printed in the daily House and Senate journals.

Members may offer amendments before the final vote. The chamber must adopt amendments either by voice or roll call votes before acting on the bill. In the House, a roll call vote on an amendment may be requested by one-fifth of the members present. In the Senate, one senator may request a roll call vote. Except during the last three days of the regular session, a bill receiving a favorable vote in the chamber where it originated must be held for one session day for possible reconsideration. If the bill is not reconsidered, it is sent to the other house and placed on the calendar there. The rule requiring bills to be held for one day after passage is commonly suspended for immediate transmittal to the other house.

Both houses must pass the bill in the same form before it may be sent to the governor. A bill that is amended in the second house must be returned to the first house for approval. In the event of disagreeing action between the two houses, a committee of conference is appointed to work out an agreement.

GOVERNOR'S ACTION; EFFECTIVE DATES

After a bill passes both houses, it is sent to the governor. The governor may approve or veto the bill. A bill becomes law when the governor signs it. A bill becomes a law without her signature if she fails to act within five days if the General Assembly is in session, or within 15 days if it has adjourned. If the governor vetoes a bill, it is returned with her objections to its house of origin. A two-thirds vote of the members of each house is required to override a veto.

Public acts take effect on October 1 following passage and special acts on approval, unless they specify otherwise.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS

The General Assembly may propose amendments to the state constitution. If a proposed constitutional amendment is approved by three-fourths of the members of each house, it is presented to the voters at the next general election in an even-numbered year. If a proposed constitutional amendment is approved by a majority but less than three-fourths of the members of each house, it is continued to the next regular session of the General Assembly elected at the next general election, where it must be approved again by a majority of the members of each house in order to be presented to the voters at the next general election in an even-numbered year.
