Brow Well - Supporting Animal Abuse & Eco-Destruction

NAVA 2010-09-23 19:38

TELEPHONE, EMAIL, DEMO!

As part of the campaign to end the sourcing of animals for laboratory experiments, we must focus on all weaknesses of the vivisection industry and stop those the supply of species which can only be sourced domestically - one of which are fish. Their use in vivisection is often forgotten, yet they bare the brunt of almost every eco-toxicology experiment inside laboratories. Fish are impossible to import due to their vulnerability to contrast in tempratures, yet without them every single eco-toxicology department using animals would have to close down.

Brow Well Fisheries are the UK's largest supplier of fish to laboratories, yet their owner arrogantly believes they are doing good by supplying Huntingdon Life Sciences, Covance and many universities. Please telephone and email them to ask how it is good to poison fish to death on behalf of international chemical companies:

SAMPLE LETTER:

Dear Brow Well Fisheries, I was sickened to hear that your company is supplying fish for experimentation to laboratories across the UK, including two notorious for animal abuse - Huntingdon Life Sciences and Covance.

The fish you sell for vivisection are used in eco-toxicology experiments where they are poisoned in order to pass agrochemicals and household cleaning products onto the market. This does not offer any means of conservation for any species, but infact quite the opposite. Dangerous substances are often placed for sale, yet cause illness and deaths to wildlife across the world.

I ask that you make the ethical choice and end your supply of fish for experimentation. Yours Sincerely, [Name]
