Advocate for Children's Safety in Your Communities

The AAP firmly believes that children deserve a safe environment in which to grow and learn.

AAP President Thomas K. McInerney, MD, FAAP, joined other health care provider organizations at the White House on January 3, 2013 to discuss the Newtown, Connecticut tragedy and to share the AAP's perspective on necessary federal policy changes moving forward. On January 16th, President Obama released the federal policy recommendations that represent the necessary national commitment to addressing gun violence prevention and mental health access in a comprehensive, meaningful way and accepted AAP recommendations provided during the January 3rd meeting.

Many members have asked what they can do to help. As a pediatrician, you are in a unique and powerful position to advocate for children's health issues. Here are steps you can take to get involved.

More information on federal advocacy can be found here.
