

APPENDIX IV.

In October, 1866, Mr. R. D. Scott reported as follows upon the condition of the Aborigines who were then at Camperdown :—

The blacks receive supplies regularly once a week when they apply ; less than the ordinary ration satisfies them. They indulge as much as ever in intoxicating drink. It is difficult to find out how they obtain it, and it appears to me most difficult to take steps to prevent it.

They occasionally resort to their Aboriginal habits in hunting, fishing, &c., but the greater part of their time seems spent about villages. In the sheep-shearing season they make themselves generally useful about stations.

I regret to say that I observe but little or no change in their social or moral progress, and again express my conviction that this end would have been better obtained by placing them under the charge of persons who would be responsible for their care and management, and if necessary, especially with their children, to use reasonably coercive means.

There are now but few at Camperdown, and I think those are worthy of some sort of building to shelter them in the cold wet nights common to this locality.

The natives have been away from Camperdown for a length of time until recently.

No rations have been sent to Camperdown for the blacks since 1866.

Mr. Samuel Wilson, of Longerenong, Wimmera, in August, 1866, states :—

Regarding the condition of the Aborigines in this neighborhood, I regret that I cannot report any improvement. They do very little work, few of them being in robust health. At shearing time some of the men are employed picking up fleeces in the woolshed, for which they receive ten shillings per week and rations.

Some time ago the principal family of them built a comfortable log hut, and fenced and trenched a small garden ; but owing to the death of one (Albert) they discontinued their residence in it, and it is now occupied by a splitter, who has paid a few shillings for the place."

The stores are distributed as required, generally about twice a week. The quantity varies greatly, according to the numbers who may be here. The supplies of tea, sugar, and tobacco were exhausted for some weeks before the new stock arrived. The clothes are distributed to those most in need.

All the Government stores are given unconditionally, except that they are not to be sold. No work is asked on account of them ; indeed, it would be useless to expect any from most of them.

The lubras sometimes fish, and the men hunt the opossum, kangaroo, emu, &c., also shoot ducks, turkeys, &c. Payment in money is the only inducement that will make them exert themselves much, and in general they are ready to spend it in buying intoxicating drinks. Their means of procuring these are fortunately very limited. The notice bearing on this subject has been posted at the hotels in the neighborhood, and any black getting drunk is prohibited from coming near the station for a time.

Their numbers are fast decreasing—there are no young women and no children in the tribe. The youngest is about thirty years of age. Four have died during the last twelve months. In a few years their race will be extinct. They are on the whole as comfortable as their habits will permit. The rations served out are probably about one-half of what is necessary to sustain them, which leaves sufficient inducement to exert themselves in hunting, &c., and prevents want in case of sickness. Food and clothing appear to be common property with them. Food procured and cooked by one is eaten without asking leave by any other, without objection by the owner. Clothing given to one will usually be seen in the possession of another in a few days.

On the whole I cannot see any prospect of improvement in their condition. They seem to be a doomed race. In no instance, in my experience, have they been badly treated by Europeans, and still they are silently disappearing from the lands that once had no other owner. If we cannot prevent this, the least we should do in taking possession of their country is to make their declining years as comfortable as their habits will allow.

Mr. A. M. Musgrove, at Warrnambool, reported in September, 1866, on the state of the Aborigines in the following words :—

I do not think the general condition of the Aborigines has improved within the past twelve months.

The stores are only occasionally distributed, except to the old people, to whom they are pretty regularly served out, say about three times a month : viz., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. of tea, 1 lb. sugar, 1 pannikin rice, 2 pannikins flour, 1 pannikin oatmeal, 1 plug tobacco. To those who are able to work I give out as little and as seldom as I possibly can, and always impress upon them that they should provide for themselves out of the money they can earn potato-dropping and shearing.

They will drink whenever they get the chance, but, I must say, lately I have not seen so much drunkenness among them ; but this I attribute to the police being a little sharper, and the fact that they have had no work to suit them, consequently no money to spend, and I am only afraid when sheep-washing and potato-digging again commence, their drinking propensities will do likewise.

When they can get anything else they certainly will not hunt, but they are compelled now to eat an occasional "opossum," beef and mutton not being quite as plentiful.

In September, 1866, Mr. James Young, of Bacchus Marsh, reported—

Since my last report, which extended to July, 1865, the largest number of blacks who have visited this district at one time was fifteen. That number remained here a fortnight ; since then I have had occasional visits from two or three at a time. There has only been one case of drunkenness brought before the police bench. There has been one death, an old lubra, apparently about eighty years old.

I am happy to say that their conduct upon the whole has been good, and that, with the clothing provided for them by the Government and what they procure themselves, they seem pretty comfortable.

The blacks are now supplied with rations from a store at contract price. * * * * *
I have no doubt that there will be a considerable saving effected by supplying them with weekly rations as required, by order on the store, instead of sending annual supplies, as formerly, from Melbourne.

In conclusion, I think that the regulations adopted by the Central Board for the supply of clothing, blankets, and rations are very satisfactory.

In July, 1866, Mr. Peter Beveridge reported upon the blacks at Swan Hill as follows :—

The state of the blacks this season is, I think, better than it usually is at this time of the year; this is, in a great measure, attributable to the good supply of clothing they have had during the last year, as ailments of a pulmonary nature seem to be what they are prone to, and good food and plenty of clothing is the best preventive of that insidious disease.

The mortality amongst the blacks during the past year has been seemingly large; but then it must be taken into consideration that all who have died during that time were either long-confirmed invalids or old men who had seen their three-score-and-ten. I think that altogether there may have been six or seven.

In September, 1867, Mr. B. W. Gummow reported as follows upon the condition of the Aborigines at Swan Hill :—

The general condition of the Aborigines is better than for some years past, there being less disease and mortality.

The stores forwarded by the Central Board have been of a very excellent quality. The mode of distribution has been by requisition, giving the names of adults and children, but supplied only to those in whom I could place the confidence that they would be properly distributed without exactions.

The blacks at Swan Hill receive their rations on Monday, weekly, unless some sick ones arrive; then according to their requirements.

On the various stations the stores are forwarded and issued, I believe, with proper discretion, in quantities in proportion to their numbers.

They hunt native game extensively, and fish likewise, of which there is abundance continually.

They indulge in intoxicating liquors to a fearful extent.

They have been arrested and imprisoned, their supply of rations temporarily stopped, and the greatest displeasure shown as to their misconduct.

In conclusion, with regard to their propensity for swallowing strong drinks, I think it is their chief vice, and I am disposed strongly to believe that the indulgence of the Central Board tends strongly to assist this evil. Blacks are very fond of tea, sugar, and tobacco, which we may class among the luxuries of their existence, but so long as they are supplied with such articles they will not spend the money they earn otherwise than in strong drinks. Alluding to the money they earn, let me inform the Board that each able-bodied black could receive four or five shillings a day on this township for his fish or game. I have frequently offered, and been refused, to purchase ducks at one shilling each. No, they prefer the publican's market, where they obtain adulterated spirits and spend the night to the annoyance of the neighborhood with their drunken orgies, the poor gins hiding their spears and waddies to avoid bloodshed, often having to seek the protection of my premises from their fury and madness.

Gins, with their heads cut by blows from waddies, fingers knocked off, are not unfrequent, perhaps more since they are afraid of making known such brutality for fear perhaps of some worse calamity befalling them.

This unhappy state of things does not apply to every individual amongst them; there are some who would not touch spirits, but they suffer and are coerced.

It is sometimes attended with danger to interfere with them, as their savage nature is then fully shown.

Police have done what they could, but they escaped over the river in their canoes and set them at defiance.

Nothing will ever put a stop to this evil until Parliament pass a clause in the Publican's Act making it punishable to any individual supplying them with intoxicating drinks, in a summary way, to the extent of a £50 penalty or six months' imprisonment, and that the evidence of Aborigines should be considered as prima facie.

Under the present state of things it is worth the publican's while to risk conviction for the remuneration he obtains by selling adulterated and diluted spirits.

At the present time I am writing this, every able-bodied blackfellow is now engaged either washing sheep or shearing, for which they get the wages of a white man—the old men, the gins, and children getting rations from the squatters.

The sums spent in drink are something considerable. As matters rest things will become worse.

Constables or magistrates will not incur the odium and revenge necessarily following an attempt to bring the parties offending to justice, where the penalty is so small.

Adequate imprisonment or fine should be inflicted, and that should be optional with the bench.

Blankets and flour, I think, would form the best stores that could be sent. Soap is an article that I have reason to believe is disposed of and not used.

Mr. Allan Hughan, when he resided at Youngera station, Swan Hill district, had charge of the Aborigines, and in September, 1866, he wrote as follows :—

I consider that the condition of the blacks here has very much improved during the past year. The young men continue most useful and faithful servants. I have not known of one instance of intoxication during the past nine months. The habits of the young people, especially with regard to the young women, seem much improved. Most of them hunt and fish during the respective seasons when not otherwise engaged, i.e., in regular work.

I have observed some distress amongst the Aborigines when sick or disabled at other places. Many apply to me for "physic." Only to-day, when at an adjoining station, one fine old fellow pleaded sadly the want of medicine, wishing he was here. He was suffering from a severe cold. I wished he was well enough to come up here and receive some attention. A few weeks since I had a poor blackfellow suffering from paralysis brought up here from a camp eight miles away. I had no hope of him, but I made him as comfortable as possible, and provided him with suitable food, soup, maizena, rice, &c., and I wrote to Melbourne for medical advice; but he gradually sank and died a fortnight since. With their usual care, they buried him and his clothes, and erected a neat structure of bark over him. During his illness, it was most pleasing to observe the real kindly care exhibited to him by the other blacks, the more especially so as none were related to him.

The shearing season has now commenced, and many of the blacks are excellent shearers. I saw four engaged to-day, and soon hope to have a larger number shearing for myself. One of the four said to me to-day, "Please keep me a place in your shed, Mr. Hughan," which I willingly promised. I much fear that many of the blacks will, after shearing, follow only too faithfully the example of other shearers; but I will exert my utmost to deter those under my more immediate control from going to the public-house. On giving a £1 note to the chief this morning for cutting me some canoes and bark, he was much pleased and said: "By-and-bye mine buy em flour along (with) a this one, bael mine want em grog." This was spontaneous and sincere. * * * * *

Of the clothing last furnished I still possess a large share, owing to so many of the blacks working for me upon wages, which I induce them to spend in clothing rather than to reserve it for the publican.

The following was Mr. C. E. Strutt's report on the Aborigines in September, 1866, at Echuca :—

Respecting the general condition of the Aborigines, I have to report that no material alteration has taken place in their habits during the last year.

The blankets and clothing are distributed on a day of which due notice has been given to the Aborigines beforehand. Those who attend are supplied accordingly, and the remainder of the articles, if any, are reserved for cases of sickness or emergency.

I regret to state that the Aborigines are still as anxious as ever to procure intoxicating liquors. The great increase in the number of public-houses in Echuca renders it more difficult to ascertain the source of supply; the police, however, have prosecuted six individuals for this offence during the past twelve months, and as four convictions were obtained, the practice is in some degree checked.

The Aborigines occasionally catch fish and opossums, and shoot wild-fowl. The main sustenance, however, is derived from the settlers' stations, where they get the coarser pieces of meat, and occasionally rations, when they help in any useful way.

The flour, tea, sugar, &c., supplied by the Government, are issued in small quantities as required, for two or three days' consumption.

There is less fighting and disturbance amongst the Aborigines than formerly, as all cases of assault are dealt with summarily by short imprisonments of a few days. In only one instance has it been necessary to send an Aboriginal to Sandhurst gaol, for assaulting a woman, during the past year.

These assaults take place as a result of intoxication; in other respects the blacks are well conducted, only one having been committed to gaol for theft.

During shearing the blacks are generally employed on the stations, and their conduct is good.

Two half-caste children have been forwarded to the station near Healesville (Coranderrk), in August last.

Mr. C. E. Strutt, P.M. at Echuca, in September, 1867, reported as follows:—

The general condition of the Aborigines in this district continues without any material alteration.

Most of the clothing has been distributed amongst the Aborigines with such occasional supplies of flour, tea, sugar, &c., as appeared to be required. The latter articles are obtained in small quantities at a time.

The Aborigines occasionally employ themselves in hunting native game, fishing, and shooting; but at this season of the year, they remain chiefly about the woolsheds of the various stations, where they are employed to assist in picking and washing wool, and occasionally in shearing and taking charge of the sheep.

The Aborigines are as fond as ever of intoxicating liquors. Four men, named "Bob," "Tommy," "Wharparella Jack," and "Tallyho," with one woman named "Bumbo," have been brought by the police before this bench on different occasions, charged with drunkenness and disorderly conduct, and have been imprisoned for short periods.

On the 7th March last, a publican was fined five pounds for allowing spirits to be obtained for the blacks at his licensed house, which has had the effect of rendering it more difficult to procure a supply.

In October, 1866, Mr. Thomas Mitchell, of Tangambalanga, near Yackandandah, reported as follows on the condition of the Aborigines:—

I am sorry to inform you that their general condition has not improved during the last twelve months, in consequence of the scarcity of native game, fish, &c., attributable in a great measure to their vicinity to the diggings and free selectors; in fact, the stores alone prevent the blacks from starving.

In conclusion, I beg to state that they still indulge in intoxicating liquors, but their want of means prevents too frequent indulgence.

Two deaths have occurred amongst them, viz., "Tiger Joe" and "Simon;" the former was accidentally drowned, and the latter died from natural causes.

The number of Aborigines at this station is twenty-seven, viz., ten men, thirteen women, and four children.

During the winter, when they suffer much from sickness, the following quantities are distributed monthly, viz.—20 lbs. flour, 8 lbs. sugar, $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. tea, $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. tobacco, and 1 lb. soap, and to each (women included) blankets, clothing, and tomahawks.

In November, 1867, Mr. Mitchell reported that no change had taken place in the condition of the Aborigines since his last report.

Mr. William Dennis, who was honorary correspondent at Carr's Plains, reported as follows on the general condition of the Aborigines in September, 1866:—

During the last year there has been less sickness than in previous ones. I do not attribute this to any particular improvement in the condition of the blacks, but from the mildness of the season, they have been less subject to colds, &c.

My practice is to distribute rations on Saturday, and if they run short during the week by giving to strangers, they are usually given an additional supply.

The weekly ration is 4 lbs. flour, 1 lb. sugar, 2 ozs. tea, 1 stick of tobacco. The three last articles are often supplemented, as there is rarely any left after Wednesday.

I have not seen any of my blacks intoxicated during this year that I am aware of, but I would not intimate that their liking for spirits is at all less than formerly. The only means taken to prevent them from drinking has been to request the innkeepers not to sell to them, and the police to see that they do not.

Occasionally they hunt, but rarely, unless hunger compels them, do they seek either fish or game.

There is very little change in their habits; they wander as formerly, and as a rule they are irregular workers. I have a bullock-driver who has been with me eighteen months, rarely has he been off the station. He spends his wages in clothes, and in purchasing additional comforts for those who are encamped at the place. All the others are very uncertain. "Blind Jenny" is near her confinement; her last child was still-born. There are now here two boys, four girls, ten women, and eight men. One of the latter is a cripple, another blind, three women are very lame, one cannot walk. There are six women and children who can read, sing, and sew pretty well—this is the extent of their accomplishments.

Mr. H. H. Wettenhall, who has succeeded Mr. W. Dennis, as honorary correspondent at Carr's Plains, reported as follows on the Aborigines in September, 1867:—

There are only nine blacks here just now, two of them helpless women, and one crippled man; one man, two women, and three children. It is seldom there are so few; the others are away visiting.

Four have died the last year—two men and two women, about middle age; they were unwell some time, and had medical attendance, physic, &c.

One boy, about twelve years old, by name Billy Dennis, Mr. Dennis had taken down to the lower station at Mortlake, where he is receiving instruction, and I enclose a small letter written by him to an old lubra up here.

This winter, two of them have built themselves nice bark huts.

The stores are all good, and they are distributed weekly.

They do not hunt much, except opossum. There are no fish.

I believe they do get intoxicated when they visit the townships, &c., but never on the station.

The Aborigines at Geelong are under the care of Messrs. J. M. Garratt and Charles Read, and in September, 1866, Mr. Garratt reported as under:—

The stores are distributed periodically under the supervision of Mr. Charles Read, my colleague correspondent taking care as much as possible to induce the blacks to go out of town to consume them. Indeed, Mr. Read has supplied one of the neighboring farmers, who appears a trustworthy man, with rations for the use of the natives who camp on and around his homestead, so that they may have as little inducement as possible to visit the town at all.

Ten years ago the number of the Geelong blacks was considerable, now only four males remain as a wretched remnant of a once powerful tribe. One man, Billy, died during the year, the particulars of whose death were duly reported at the time. Intoxicating drink is still their bane, and notwithstanding that every effort is made to deter publicans and others from supplying liquor, it almost invariably happens that a visit to Geelong is accompanied by a drunken bout, ending in a night in the lock-up. We are utterly at a loss to recommend any plan, the adoption of which would in any material degree lessen this evil, and, however sad it may appear to have to say it, we are forced to report our decided conviction that nothing but complete extinction awaits, not merely the Geelong tribe, but all the neighboring families of Aborigines also.

We would report with very great pleasure an instance of kindness on the part of our blackfellows which proves them to be susceptible of fine and noble instincts and feelings. The case is as follows :—A child, two years old, was lost at the Little River ; diligent search was made by the neighbors in vain ; the disconsolate father applied to me for the assistance of the blacks ; they went, and for several days were diligently and intelligently engaged in the search. They were not successful, the poor child never having been found, but the father expressed to me his deep gratitude to these simple, kind-hearted men for their exertions.

In the matter of clothing, we would suggest that blankets and shirts of some peculiar color and texture should be used so as to prevent the possibility of sale or exchange for drink.

In September, 1867, Mr. J. M. Garratt reported as follows on the general condition of the Aborigines at Geelong :—

Three blackfellows only now remain of the once numerous and powerful Barrabool tribe, viz., Jerry King Dandanook, Harry, and Billy Gore. On Christmas Day last Timboo was buried. He was the most intelligent of the survivors, having learned English in Mr. Tuckfield's school years ago.

The three men now left employ their time principally in roaming about the country between here and Queenscliff and the Heads, with occasional visits to Geelong for rations and clothes, which are distributed to them as they require from the stores supplied by the Board, and which are placed under the care of Mr. Charles Read, my fellow-correspondent (Mr. Henry Andrews having left the district).

I am pained to have to report that the blacks still indulge in the use of intoxicating drink to a frightful extent whenever they visit town, and all my vigilance in watching them and giving instructions to the police to lay information against publicans supplying them with drink is unavailing.

During a recent visit to Melbourne they were impressed with the notion that they ought to marry, and I fully believe that, if they could be induced to reside on one of the Government establishments and wives supplied, they would be much improved in condition. They are, however, so firmly wedded to their native soil that it is most difficult to induce them to reside anywhere else.

These three men are most warmly attached to myself and Mr. Read, and would do anything for any member of our families.

I would strongly urge upon the Board the desirability of getting these three men removed to Mr. Green's establishment, as I am certain that unless this can be done a very short time will bring them to death.

Mr. James Finley, of Towaninnie, reported in September, 1867, as follows :—

The mode of distributing the stores has been hitherto weekly, and in such quantities as have been in accordance with the strictest economy, to the number of blacks stationed here from time to time. I have generally endeavored to average flour at the rate of 7 lbs. per week for each adult, and other stores accordingly. As regarding their procuring game or fish, it is a very rare occurrence, inasmuch as the game in this part of the country is exceedingly scarce, the country being, for the most part, composed of plains ; and of fish there is none, as there are no rivers or creeks here with permanent water.

Regarding their indulgence in spirits, I am happy to inform you that their conduct is unquestionable, as drunkenness is almost totally unknown here. With respect to their progress, &c., I am happy to state that they appear to be very comfortable and reside together in harmony, and during the season of the year when they can obtain employment such as they can do, they willingly accept of it, and the proceeds of such labor is generally spent in procuring any little necessary article of clothing, as their ambition is to appear as decent as possible.

In November, 1866, Mr. Alexander Wilson, of Vectis, reported favorably of the Aborigines who reside on the station. The following is an extract from his report :—

The native, "Sandy," has built a hut, and his wife keeps it as neat as any white woman.

She is a woman of good character, and in consequence has had two children in sixteen months ; and I have no doubt she will have plenty more of them.

A few more of the Aborigines have been applying to get the team to put up huts for themselves.

Mr. Alexander Wilson, of Vectis, reported in December, 1867, to Mr. Charles Wilson, of Walmer, Horsham, in the following terms as to the condition of the Aborigines :—

I beg to state that no deaths have occurred here during the season, neither have there been any births ; the youngest black child on the station is fourteen months old. I cannot report favorably upon the steadiness or sobriety of the natives, as they are addicted to drink to a man, and invariably spend all their earnings in this way. The only articles which they will buy are sugar and tobacco—clothing they decline to provide, though they might have the means.

Mr. Andrew Porteous, honorary correspondent at Carngham, reported in October, 1866, on the condition of the Aborigines as follows :—

The Mount Emu tribe still prefer to roam about in small bands from station to station and the various goldfields, returning at short intervals for a supply of the Board's stores. They still continue to hunt the opossum and make rugs, for which they find a ready sale ; other game is very scarce in the district. The women also continue to make nets and baskets.

About eight months ago, the chief of the tribe, with a number of others, visited Coranderrk, and stayed there a few weeks. On his return he described everything that he had seen, and he thought that the arrangements at Coranderrk were a great improvement on the former habits of the blackfellows. Some of the young men of the tribe after seeing, and I suppose practising a little of the industry at Coranderrk, when they returned, were very anxious to get a job of fencing, as they said they could do it as well as the whitefellows.

I have since seen some of them at work fencing, and doing the work very well. The aged of the tribe cannot be induced to remain at work more than an hour or two at a time.

I still continue to supply the Board's stores in small quantities, what will do them for a few days only ; although I have not known any of them to barter away their rations, yet if they had a larger quantity in their possession at one time I believe they would give it away for grog.

There is a slight improvement towards temperance in the tribe, as a number of the greatest drunkards have died, yet some of them would still give almost anything they possess for drink.

Blankets and other clothing I have always branded before giving them, and I think this should be always done, or otherwise they will part with the article that is not branded. As a proof of this, a number of the tribe on their way home from Coranderrk were supplied with blankets at Bacchus Marsh, and before they reached Carngham some of them had disposed of them.

The number of the tribe at present, as entered in my book, is fifty-seven.

In a report dated 20th September, 1867, Mr. Andrew Porteous, of Carngham, writes :—

The condition of the Aborigines is not much altered since my last report. The tribe at present numbers forty-seven, namely, twenty-six males and twenty-one females. They continue to hunt such game as can be found in the district. The opossum is plentiful, and they make rugs with the skins. They also fish in such lakes and creeks as fish can be found in. They sell the opossum rugs, and sometimes offer fish for sale, with the proceeds of which they supply themselves with rations, and sometimes with clothes, such as hats, handkerchiefs, and some of them with boots. The tribe are seldom all together, but travel about from station to station in bands of six or eight.

During the month of July last, it being wet and cold, a large number of the tribe camped with me, and the Board's stores were very acceptable, as the weather was such that they could not hunt. Since then they have been travelling amongst the stations, only a few calling for rations.

The stores supplied by the Board are all of the best quality, and give great satisfaction to the Aborigines.

I have made no change in the manner of distributing stores. Each man receives a blanket, one serge shirt, one twill shirt, and a pair of trousers, and each woman a blanket and one dress; and to prevent them disposing of any article, I invariably brand each with oil paint.

When they are camped with me I supply each twice a week with a small quantity of rations, and when they leave or make a call for rations, I give each about 10 lbs. of flour and 3 lbs. of sugar, with a proportion of tea, and $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. of tobacco and $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. of soap.

I regret much that I cannot yet inform the Board that the Aborigines have taken any dislike to intoxicating liquors, as whenever they can get it they get intoxicated, yet I do not think that they crave after it so much as they used to do. Perhaps this may be accounted for from the fact that a number of the most intemperate of the tribe have died from its effects, and some of the steady ones frequently tell the others that "blackfellow soon all gone if drink much grog."

The tribe is, I believe, as comfortable as they can wish to be, as there are plenty of stores for them when they wish to call for them, and during the year there has been no expense incurred for doctors. There has been a little sickness but a little slight medicine has generally restored them to health.

I cannot conclude this report without mentioning the shrewdness of James Miller and David Smith in tracing out what was important evidence against the murderers of Mr. Burke. Having searched out the pistols buried under a log, and tracked the horses to near the spot where the murder took place, they returned home, and James Miller told me that he believed the gold was in Searle's stable, as it had not been properly searched, and that it must be concealed in a drain that ran through the stable. This was on Friday, and I told him and David to take horses, and they could go on Monday and search the stable. Something prevented them going on Monday, and on Tuesday, when on their way, they met Mr. Hill at Smythesdale with the gold taken from the very spot where Miller supposed it to be concealed. It certainly was fortunate that they did not go on Friday to search, or the link of conviction would not have been so complete against the murderers.

I have just received a letter from the Borough Council of Buninyong, requesting me to send as many Aborigines as possible to Buninyong, as they are determined to get up a grand coroboree on the arrival of His Royal Highness the Duke of Edinburgh. I have replied, and pointed out the danger, and even risk, to the Aborigines' lives to allow them to congregate near any large town. As a proof of this, last summer the Mount Emu and Hopkins tribe met at Ballarat, and gave a public coroboree, and the consequence was, that the Aborigines got so intoxicated for about a week that two of the Mount Emu tribe died shortly after returning to their district, and many others lingered in a sickly state for months. I have therefore declined to comply with the request, unless sanctioned by the Central Board, and the Board will please say whether the request may be complied with or not.

Mr. George Houston, of Gunbower station, reported as follows in September, 1866:—

I regret I cannot give you any pleasing information regarding the Aborigines. They have mostly been working at the neighboring stations for the last four months, and I have seen little of them.

I have been in the habit of distributing your supplies in moderate quantities among them while they lasted, as I have done in previous seasons.

The season for fishing and hunting is close at hand, and they will no doubt spend the summer in doing so, as usual.

In September, 1867, in a report Mr. George Houston reported as under:—

The condition of the blacks is very much improved. No doubt this is caused greatly by the steps taken by your Board to restrict the supply of liquor to them at the townships, and by the closing of the grog shanty on Mr. Glass' run.

There have been no deaths since the beginning of the year, and one child (a female half-caste) has been born about two months ago.

The stores and clothing have been finer in quality and sufficient in quantity, and I have not altered the usual method of distribution.

In summer and autumn they hunt and fish as usual, and as there is abundance of game in this neighborhood, they assemble here in considerable numbers at these seasons.

During the next two months the young men will be mostly employed at the shearing-sheds in the neighborhood.
