The title of this book was taken from the last verse of the poem:

'For a' that and a' that'

by Robert Burns.

Acknowledgements

The manuscript of this book was read by all other members of the Aboriginal Treaty Committee, by Dr Diane Barwick and Dr Nancy Williams, both of whom are anthropologists with experience in North America as well as Australia, and by David Broadbent, of The Age. All these friends and colleagues commented with frankness and concern.

I am very grateful for their help, which has much improved a book written at great speed, for a purpose which is urgent. But the responsibility for what is in this book is mine alone. No one else should be criticised, if only because I did not take all the advice I was given.

John Reid was responsible for the design, and the Committee appreciates the time, skill and commitment which he gave freely.

For the illustrations, we are grateful to the resource centre and photographic section of the Australian Institute of Aboriginal Studies, to Arthur Palmer of the Northern Land Council, to George Chaloupka of the Northern Territory Museums and Art Galleries, to the National Aboriginal Conference, to the Department of Aboriginal Affairs, to The Canberra Times, to the National Library of Australia, and to the North Queensland Land Council.

The manuscript was processed with skill by Ann Faria and Sally McClure and I am grateful for their patience.
