Title: Martumili

Publication info: Martumili Artists, *2014

Physical descrip: 1 online resource : colour illustrations

Abstract: "Martumili Artists was established by Martu people living in the communities of Parnpajinya (Newman), Jigalong, Parnngurr, Punmu, Kunawarritji, Irrungadji and Warralong, after long and cautious observation of other desert artists' experiences of the art market. The artists and their families are the traditional custodians of vast stretches of the Great Sandy, Little Sandy and Gibson Deserts as well as the Karlamilyi (Rudall River) area. Most Martu people maintain an entirely independent, nomadic desert lifestyle until the 1950s and 1960s when they walked into settlements in response to a long and severe drought. Today, Martu people live in their own communities and regularly visit regional centres such as Newman and Port Hedland. Art plays a particularly important role in the cultural and economic life of the Martu communities. Many of the Martu artists are senior custodians of Martu cultural heritage who use their arts practices as a conduit for passing on knowledge of country and culture to younger family members. At the same time, managing the exhibition and sale of artworks is an important way in which Martu artists are carving out a contemporary, engaged and positive livelihood as well as winning new audiences with their beautiful desert country and culture. Martumili Artists captivating work also marks an extension of the international profile of the Pilbara region, which has previously centred on the resource wealth and mineral exports of the area. Martu artists have been central to the emerging recognition of the East Pilbara as a centre of extensive Indigenous cultural heritage and artistic excellence in Australia." --Taken from About Us

Title: We don't need a map : a Martu experience of Western Desert

Publication info: [2012?]-

Physical descrip: 1 online resource (website)

Abstract: "We don't need a map brings the desert to the city to celebrate the lively and enduring culture of the Martu â€” the traditional owners of a vast area of Western Australia's Western Desert. This remarkable exhibition includes the work of more than 30 artists and is an exploration of the Martu people, their way of life, the way they care for country and belong to it. As well as illustrating the distinct contemporary visual language of the Martu, this landmark event breaks down barriers by bringing together Martu and other artists to collaborate and exhibit together. Featuring stunning paintings, cutting-edge new media collaborations, finely wrought objects, aerial desert photography, bush tucker and talks with the Martu artists and rangers, the exhibition and public program will surprise and inspire audiences. Co-curated by Erin Coates; FAC Exhibitions Coordinator, Kathleen Sorensen; Martu artist and Cultural Consultant and Gabrielle Sullivan; Martumili Artists Manager. This project is a partnership between Fremantle Arts Centre, Kanyirninpa Jukurrpa and Martumili Artists. It is made possible with support from BHP Billiton Iron Ore." -- From 'about' web pag
