NATIONAL PARKS AND WILDLIFE ACT 1974

I, LISA CORBYN, Director General of the Department of Environment, Climate Change and Water, in accordance with section 87(6) of the National Parks and Wildlife Act 1974, set the following minimum standards for requirements specified in the regulations or in a code of practice adopted or prescribed by the regulations under section 87(3) of the National Parks and Wildlife Act 1974.

Date signed: 3 September 2010.

LISA CORBYN,
Director General

MINIMUM STANDARDS FOR CODES OF PRACTICE
FOR THE PROTECTION OF ABORIGINAL OBJECTS IN NSW

Introduction

The National Parks and Wildlife Act 1974 (“the Act”) provides that a person who exercises due diligence in determining that their actions will not harm Aboriginal objects has a defence against prosecution for the strict liability offence at section 86(2) of the Act if they later unknowingly harm an object.

Section 87(3) of the Act provides for requirements for due diligence to be contained within a Code of Practice adopted or prescribed by the National Parks and Wildlife Regulation 2009 (“the Regulation”). A general Due Diligence Code of Practice has been prepared that provides general guidance on the steps a person can follow to satisfy their due diligence requirements. Other Codes of Practice can also provide specific due diligence guidance for certain classes of activity or for particular industry sectors. When such a Code of Practice is complied with it may also be relied upon as a due diligence defence for the relevant activity or industry operation.

Such Codes are appropriate where a specific industry sector has a characteristic or predictable range of activities associated with its operations that are better suited (relative to the General Due Diligence Code of Practice) to fixed, industry-specific measures to guide their due diligence requirements. The same may also apply for certain classes of activity that, while not necessarily industry-specific, are similarly common in character.

The Director General of the Department of Environment, Climate Change and Water (DECCW) may set Minimum Standards for Due Diligence Codes of Practice. A Code of Practice cannot be adopted or prescribed by the regulations unless the Minister for Climate Change and the Environment is satisfied that these Minimum Standards have been met by that Code. This requirement ensures that the quality of all Codes of Practice in force is at least of the same standard as that of the general Due Diligence Code of Practice.

The Minimum Standards for Due Diligence

Set out below are the Minimum Standards that apply for the purposes of section 87(6) of the Act. Any Code of Practice for due diligence that is to be adopted or prescribed by the Regulation must, at a minimum, satisfy ALL of the matters listed below:

1. Explanation of Due Diligence

A Code of Practice for due diligence is to provide:

- a summary of the relevant objects of the National Parks and Wildlife Act 1974 and a plain English explanation of the relevant provisions contained in Part 6 of that Act relating to the protection of Aboriginal heritage, and
- a plain English explanation of the concept of due diligence as applied to the protection of Aboriginal heritage in a manner consistent with the objects and provisions of the Act.

2. The nature of an activity and the likelihood of it causing harm to Aboriginal objects.

A Code of Practice for due diligence is to:

- describe the general range of environments and landscape features within which the specific class of activity or the industry sector typically operates,

- provide examples of the typical range of Aboriginal objects that are likely to occur within these environments and landscape features, including general descriptions and photographs that would aid recognition of such objects in the field, and
- identify the specific activities within the class of activity or industry sector to which the Code relates that are likely to cause harm to Aboriginal objects should they be present. This should include consideration of whether the specific activities will disturb the ground surface or any trees that may be scarred trees.

3. Steps to identify whether or not Aboriginal objects are, or are likely to be, present in an area.

A Code of Practice for due diligence is to guide a person so they can:

- determine from a search of the Aboriginal Heritage Information Management System (AHIMS) site records maintained by the Department of Environment, Climate Change and Water for that area what is already known regarding the presence of Aboriginal objects on the land where it is proposed to carry out the activities to which the Code relates.
- use other sources of information of which the person is already aware (for example previous surveys, studies or reports the person has commissioned or is otherwise directly aware of) to identify whether or not Aboriginal objects are likely to be present in that area,
- assess the land where it is proposed to carry out the activities to determine the likelihood of Aboriginal objects being present on that land. If the land has not been disturbed by previous activity this should include consideration of whether the land contains landscape features that indicate the likely presence of Aboriginal objects., and
- where
 - the initial investigations in 3a. and b. above identify that Aboriginal objects are present on the land or
 - the activity is occurring on land that has not been previously disturbed and contains one or more landscape features identified in 3c undertake a desktop assessment and visual inspection of the land where it is proposed to carry out the activities so that a person can confirm whether or not Aboriginal objects are present. This should also include guidance on when it may also be necessary to engage a person with expertise in locating and identifying Aboriginal objects.

4. Steps to avoid harm where Aboriginal objects are known to be present or likely to be present.

A Code of Practice for due diligence is to guide a person so that, in relation to Aboriginal objects confirmed to be present on the land or in relation to landscape features likely to contain Aboriginal objects, they can carry out the activities without causing harm to those Aboriginal objects.

This should include guidance on modifying specific activities to avoid or otherwise relocate them away from the landscape feature(s) or known Aboriginal object(s). For example buffer zones can be used for specific activities near known Aboriginal objects or landscape features.

Standardised prescriptions for specific activities can be used for specific types of landscape feature and/or for specific types of Aboriginal objects where this aids the conduct of activities so that they avoid harm.

5. Guidance on when an Aboriginal Heritage Impact Permit is required.

A Code of Practice for due diligence is to guide a person so that, in circumstances where a specific activity is not able to avoid harm or is likely to cause harm to Aboriginal objects, the person can determine whether and how they should apply for an Aboriginal Heritage Impact Permit (AHIP). This should include:

- when an AHIP is not required (e.g. exemptions etc)
- how to access information regarding the AHIP application procedure, and
- how to obtain professional advice and assistance in preparing AHIP applications.

Relevant DECCW contacts and, if applicable, industry contacts are also to be provided in the Code so that advice can be obtained on how to use the Code and AHIP procedures.

6. Engagement with the Aboriginal Community

A Code of Practice for due diligence is to:

- encourage and guide users of the Code about what, if any, steps must be taken to engage relevant Aboriginal community groups or organisations with responsibility for cultural heritage protection in the area where the Code applies. This guidance is to include how that engagement can be implemented at the appropriate stages of the due diligence process contained in the Code.
- note that all AHIP applicants are required by DECCW to undertake consultation with Aboriginal people who hold cultural knowledge of Aboriginal objects and/or places in accordance with the requirements set out in clause 80C of the National Parks and Wildlife Regulation 2009 (the Regulation).
- note that the requirements in the Regulation as further explained in the DECCW Aboriginal Cultural Heritage Consultation Requirements for Proponents 2010 may be followed where a proponent may be uncertain about whether or not their proposed activity may have the potential to harm Aboriginal objects or places and the proponent is required to undertake a cultural heritage assessment to establish the potential harm their proposal may have on Aboriginal objects and places.

7. Authorship and Certification of Codes

A Code of Practice for due diligence is to:

- be prepared by persons or organisations with expertise in locating, identifying and managing impacts on Aboriginal objects.
- include details of the persons or organisations responsible for preparation of the Code.
- be certified by those persons or organisations that the Code complies with all of the requirements of the Minimum Standards in place at the time the code was prepared.

Exemption Granted

MARK GORTA,
 Manager, Waste Management Section
 Environment Protection Authority
 by delegation

NOTES

The EPA may amend or revoke this exemption at any time. It is the responsibility of the generator, processor and consumer to ensure that they comply with all relevant requirements of the most current exemption. The current version of an exemption will be available on the EPA website: www.environment.nsw.gov.au

In gazetting this general exemption, the EPA is exempting the relevant waste from the specific requirements of the Act and Regulations as stated in this exemption. The EPA is not in any way endorsing the use of this substance or guaranteeing that the substance will confer benefit.

The use of exempted material remains subject to other relevant environmental regulations within the Act and Regulations. For example, a person who pollutes land (s142A) or water (s120), or does not meet the special requirements for asbestos waste (clause 42), regardless of having an exemption, is guilty of an offence and subject to prosecution.

For the purposes of arrangements between a generator, a processor and a consumer, a 'transaction' is taken to mean the contractual agreement between the two parties which specifies the exchange of waste material from one party to another. A 'statement of compliance' must be in writing and be provided with each transaction.

The conditions set out in this exemption are designed to minimise the risk of potential harm to the environment, human health and agriculture, however, neither this exemption nor these conditions guarantee that the environment, human health or agriculture will not be harmed.

The consumer should assess whether or not the exempted material is fit for the purpose the material is proposed to be used and whether this use will cause harm. The consumer may need to seek expert engineering or technical advice.

This exemption does not apply to any material received at a premises that is required to be licensed for waste disposal (application to land) activities under the provisions of the Act. This exemption does not remove the need for a site at which processing occurs to be licensed, if required under Schedule 1 of the Act.

This exemption does not alter the requirements of any other relevant legislation that must be met in utilising this material, including for example, the need to prepare a Material Safety Data Sheet (MSDS).

Regardless of any exemption provided by the EPA, the person who causes or permits the application of the substance to land must ensure that the action is lawful and consistent with the development consent requirements of the land.

All records required to be kept under this exemption must be made available to authorised officers of the EPA upon request.

Failure to comply with the conditions of this Notice of Exemption may constitute an offence under clause 51 of the Regulation and the responsible person will be required to comply with the normal regulatory provisions.

Manager, Waste Management Section

NOTES

The EPA may amend or revoke this exemption at any time. It is the responsibility of the generator, processor and consumer to ensure that they comply with all relevant requirements of the most current exemption. The current version of an exemption will be available on the EPA website: www.environment.nsw.gov.au

In gazetting this general exemption, the EPA is exempting the relevant waste from the specific requirements of the Act and Regulations as stated in this exemption. The EPA is not in any way endorsing the use of this substance or guaranteeing that the substance will confer benefit.

The use of exempted material remains subject to other relevant environmental regulations within the Act and Regulations. For example, a person who pollutes land (s142A) or water (s120), or does not meet the special requirements for asbestos waste (clause 42), regardless of having an exemption, is guilty of an offence and subject to prosecution.

For the purposes of arrangements between a generator, a processor and a consumer, a 'transaction' is taken to mean the contractual agreement between the two parties which specifies the exchange of waste material from one party to another. A 'statement of compliance' must be in writing and be provided with each transaction.

The conditions set out in this exemption are designed to minimise the risk of potential harm to the environment, human health and agriculture, however, neither this exemption nor these conditions guarantee that the environment, human health or agriculture will not be harmed.

The consumer should assess whether or not the exempted material is fit for the purpose the material is proposed to be used and whether this use will cause harm. The consumer may need to seek expert engineering or technical advice.

This exemption does not apply to any material received at a premises that is required to be licensed for waste disposal (application to land) activities under the provisions of the Act. This exemption does not remove the need for a site at which processing occurs to be licensed, if required under Schedule 1 of the Act.

This exemption does not alter the requirements of any other relevant legislation that must be met in utilising this material, including for example, the need to prepare a Material Safety Data Sheet (MSDS).

Regardless of any exemption provided by the EPA, the person who causes or permits the application of the substance to land must ensure that the action is lawful and consistent with the development consent requirements of the land.

All records required to be kept under this exemption must be made available to authorised officers of the EPA upon request.

Failure to comply with the conditions of this Notice of Exemption may constitute an offence under clause 51 of the Regulation and the responsible person will be required to comply with the normal regulatory provisions.

Exemption Granted

MARK GORTA,
Manager, Waste Management Section
Environment Protection Authority
by delegation

NOTES

The EPA may amend or revoke this exemption at any time. It is the responsibility of the generator, processor and consumer to ensure that they comply with all relevant requirements of the most current exemption. The current version of an exemption will be available on the EPA website: www.environment.nsw.gov.au

In gazetting this general exemption, the EPA is exempting the relevant waste from the specific requirements of the Act and Regulations as stated in this exemption. The EPA is not in any way endorsing the use of this substance or guaranteeing that the substance will confer benefit.

The use of exempted material remains subject to other relevant environmental regulations within the Act and Regulations. For example, a person who pollutes land (s142A) or water (s120), or does not meet the special requirements for asbestos waste (clause 42), regardless of having an exemption, is guilty of an offence and subject to prosecution.

For the purposes of arrangements between a generator, a processor and a consumer, a 'transaction' is taken to mean the contractual agreement between the two parties which specifies the exchange of waste material from one party to another. A 'statement of compliance' must be in writing and be provided with each transaction.

The conditions set out in this exemption are designed to minimise the risk of potential harm to the environment, human health and agriculture, however, neither this exemption nor these conditions guarantee that the environment, human health or agriculture will not be harmed.

The consumer should assess whether or not the exempted material is fit for the purpose the material is proposed to be used and whether this use will cause harm. The consumer may need to seek expert engineering or technical advice.

This exemption does not apply to any material received at a premises that is required to be licensed for waste disposal (application to land) activities under the provisions of the Act. This exemption does not remove the need for a site at which processing occurs to be licensed, if required under Schedule 1 of the Act.

This exemption does not alter the requirements of any other relevant legislation that must be met in utilising this material, including for example, the need to prepare a Material Safety Data Sheet (MSDS).

Regardless of any exemption provided by the EPA, the person who causes or permits the application of the substance to land must ensure that the action is lawful and consistent with the development consent requirements of the land.

All records required to be kept under this exemption must be made available to authorised officers of the EPA upon request.

Failure to comply with the conditions of this Notice of Exemption may constitute an offence under clause 51 of the Regulation and the responsible person will be required to comply with the normal regulatory provisions.
