David Mould Director

David founded Second Strike in 1999 at the age of 18. After 6 years in his high school Student Council, including 2 years as president, other schools started to contact him for advice and assistance. As a result of this need, Second Strike was created to provide training and support to SRCs everywhere.

The SRC at David's school went from dysfunctional mess to a well-oiled machine with David at the helm. He also had 2 years experience on his primary school JSC.

Whilst still at school, David hosted a state-wide SRC conference where the idea for the VicSRC was proposed and formed.

A highly recommended public speaker for his engaging style and challenging theories, David frequently presents at conferences on education and student participation.

Did You Know...?

A couple of years ago a survey was run across the UK the USA and Australia to determine people's worst fears.

In third position was death.

In second position was spiders.

In first place ... public speaking. You are not alone!

Some places to hide to avoid giving a speech

Under the stairs is the classic hiding place, but it's also the first place they'll look for you.

You could try just not showing up for the day, but then everyone will know why!

Best place to hide is in the crowd, get your friends to mill about and help you blend in and act ignorant of your whereabouts.

OR

You could give the speech and be pretty damn good. You need some confidence, which you can gain from experience, and some experience, which you can gain with confidence.

Lets create some occasions with a safe and friendly audience to practice public speaking, and we will coach you through developing your skill and personal style.

Most of the time it's not what you say, it's how you say it...

...Fortunately we are also experts at body language and stage craft.

Some free ideas that can improve students ability at public speaking.

1. During an occasional meeting, ask students to stand as they speak. This helps get people comfortable with the idea of public presentations in a safe environment.
2. In advance of any speech, take the student to the venue and give them some time on the stage, practice the speech there, project their voice to the back of the venue, practice with a microphone.
3. Call for volunteers to give a short speech on a topic of their choice. At the end ask the audience to give helpful comments on what the speaker did well, and then what the speaker could improve on.
4. Consider purchasing a resource kit from Second Strike on public speaking for handouts, tip sheets and more ideas.

Contact Us

Second Strike has over ten years experience working with SRCs and other student leaders—not including the times when we were student leaders ourselves. We strongly believe in the capabilities of young leaders.
