SENIOR APPOINTMENTS

50th Anniversary Chair in English Literature University of Wolverhampton - Faculty of Arts

The University is continuing its ambitious plans to develop its research base in areas where significant strength already exists and in some new areas critical to its regional mission. It has continued to invest heavily in building links with business and we believe our research has an important role to play in the future economic growth and regeneration of the region.

To mark the 50th anniversary of English Literature at the University of Wolverhampton we are seeking to appoint a Professor in English to take a leadership role in developing our research culture towards REF2020 and beyond.

The post-holder should have a relevant PhD and an international reputation in any area or period of specialism, complementary to existing research groupings in transnational studies and popular culture. You will have a track record of publishing internationally excellent and world-leading outputs; experience of leading successful collaborative bids for external income; the ability to generate impact; and demonstrate the ability to support and encourage the research output of others. You must demonstrate significant Undergraduate & Postgraduate teaching experience and have a record of supervising research degree students to completion.

LIBRARY

The London Library is the largest independent lending library in the world and one of the UK's leading literary institutions. It has a long and illustrious history dating back to 1840 when its founder, Thomas Carlyle, proclaimed that London needed a serious lending library where members would be free to browse the shelves and, most importantly, to take the books home to read in comfort and seclusion. Over the past 175 years the Library has been a haven not just for serious readers but for writers of all kinds, including some of the most celebrated names of their day – Charles Darwin, Charles Dickens, George Eliot, Henry James, J.S. Mill, William Morris, Beatrice Webb and Virginia Woolf; later Agatha Christie, Winston Churchill, T.S. Eliot, Ian Fleming, Rose Macaulay, and Stefan Zweig, to name but a few.

The Library employs 60 members of staff and has around 6,600 members. It receives no public funding and relies upon a combination of membership fees, investment income and philanthropic support to cover annual operating costs of around £4 million. This is an exciting opportunity to join one of the UK's leading literary organisations as it embarks on a new chapter in its history.

Inez Lynn, the current Librarian (Director), is to retire in September 2017 after 15 years at the helm. Her successor will lead the organisation through the next exciting stage in its development as the Library seeks to raise its profile and enhance its appeal to existing and new members and supporters.

The next Director will be an exceptional individual with a subtle blend of experience which reflects the balance between the charitable purpose of the Library and the commercial imperatives of a leading cultural institution.

Application is by CV and a brief cover letter. For further information and ways to apply please visit www.odgers.com/61202. Please note that the closing date for applications is 29 March 2017.

UNIVERSITY OF LEICESTER

Executive Director of the English Association

www2.le.ac.uk/offices/english-association

Salary Grade 8: £41,709 to £46,924 per annum

Permanent position, available from November 2017, subject to a 5-year review.

About the role: In this role you will lead and develop the business operations of the English Association, which spans one of the broadest subject areas in the UK. You will be responsible for the management and oversight of the English Association's activities as both a subject association and a learned society. This includes the organisation and delivery of an annual events programme that promotes English as a subject across the sectors that align with the Association's mission: primary, secondary and higher education.

About you: With a relevant degree or professional qualification, you will have substantial experience in a relevant sector or charity. In addition to people, project and financial management experience at a senior level, you will have excellent communication skills and an ability to develop an effective marketing strategy. We are looking for candidates who are able to lead and motivate a team in a busy environment but who are also able to represent the Association effectively on broad educational and policy issues.

Informal enquiries are welcome and should be made to the Chair of the English Association, Professor Martin Halliwell on mrh17@le.ac.uk
