Physical descrip: [166]p. : chiefly col. ill. ; 27 cm.

Annotation: It is the late 1940s and Broome, a small pearling town in the heart of an ancient land, is still recovering from WWII. Ubby, a smart, street-wise Aboriginal girl, is the leader of a small rag-tag gang known as the 'Underdogs'. Trying to make a name for the Underdogs, she meets Sai Fong, a Chinese girl just off the boat from Shanghai. From the moment Ubby and Sai Fong meet, their worlds collide as they find themselves thrown into a series of bizarre adventures full of myths and legends and everything from ancient mechanical demons to fantastic beasts - and secrets never before exposed.

Title: Rubibi news / Rubibi Working Group

Publication info: Broome, W.A. : Kimberley Land Council, 1995-

Physical descrip: v. : ill., maps ; 30 cm.

Abstract: Newsletter of group formed by members of Yawuru, Dugunand Goolarabooloo groups to "speak with 'one voice' on all issues concerning both Native title and Aboriginal heritage". The name Rubibi "refers to an important water place near Kennedy Hill and was a name traditionally used to refer to the Broome area."--from p. 1, no. 1, June 1995.

Title: Statistics for community governance : the Yawuru indigenous population survey of Broome / J. Taylor, B. Doran, M. Parriman and E. Yu

Publication info: [Canberra] : Centre for Aboriginal Economic Policy Research, ANU, 2012.

ISBN: 0731549813

Physical descrip: 30 pages : coloured illustrations, charts, maps ; 30 cm

Annotation: "This paper presents a case study of an exercise in Aboriginal community governance. It sets out the background events that led the Yawuru Native Title Holders Aboriginal Corporation to secure information for its own needs as an act of self-determination and essential governance, and it presents some of the key findings from that exercise. As the Indigenous rights agenda shifts from the pursuit of restitution to the management and implementation of benefits, those with proprietary rights are finding it increasingly necessary to build internal capacity for post-native title governance and community planning, including in the area of information retrieval and application. As an incorporated land-holding group, the Yawuru people of Broome are amongst the first in Australia to move in this area of information gathering, certainly in terms of the degree of local control, participation and conceptual thinking around the logistics and rationale for such an exercise. An innovative addition has been the incorporation of survey output data into a Geographic Information System to provide for spatial analysis and a decision support mechanism for local community planning. In launching and administering the 'Knowing our Community' household survey in Broome, the Yawuru have set a precedent in the acquisition and application of demographic information for internal planning and community development in the post-native title determination era" [Taken from abstract]

Annotation: Using three case studies, thesis examines the interaction between Australian anthropologists, lawyers and judges in native title cases; it is a reaction to the oversimplified characterisation of expert testimony as a choice between the role of advocate and independent expert (p. 320); each case study consists of two chapters, the first outlining the relevant anthropological archive and the second outlining how the archive is used to formulate the expert opinion and its reception by the judge; the three case studies are the fact-finding hearing in the original Mabo decision; the Rubibi and the De Rose Hill claims; suggests a robust academic model for the anthropologist is to project expert independence is the skilful triangulation between the anthropological archive, the claimants' evidence and the legal doctrine of native title; considers whether this was done in each of the case studies; examines if and how the fields of anthropology and law have changed

Annotation: "An investigation into the structure of verbal predicates in Bardi, a Nyulnyulan language from the North-Western Australian coast. Examination of possible synchronic analyses and reconstruct the history of the systems between Proto-Nyulnyulan and the modern protested languages. There has been very little previous work on the history of complex predicates, and no detailed historical reconstruction for the Nyulnyulan family. ... an analysis of the structure of verbal predicates in the modern languages, and present reconstructions to show how they have changed over time. ... the first reconstruction of the Proto-Nyulnyulan verbal system and show in detail what changes Bardi has undergone."

Annotation: This study explores relationships between the participants and the researcher, and relationships between participants and other members of the community. It is also a study of where Broome people are today, discovering where we have come from, and the experiences of our families and why we are who we are now. From discussions on Aboriginality, it is obvious that our identity as Broome people is unique in comparison to any other part of Australia, that our reference points, culture, priorities and lifestyle (and therefore our Aboriginal terms of reference) differ from those of Aboriginal people in other parts of Australia (Curtin University Centre for Aboriginal Studies 1997). This study was conducted with three major themes: Aboriginal relationships to sea and coast; the formation of identity and worldview of coastal Aboriginal people of this area; and their rights and responsibilities in relation to the management of these sea and coastal resources.
