Source: Anthropological Linguistics Vol. 50 no. 3-4 (Fall and Winter 2008), p. 223-248
Annotation: 'The Cairns rainforest region in northeast Queensland, Australia, constitutes a distinct geographical zone and also a small linguistic area. This article focuses on contact between the dialects of two languages--Yidin, which came into the area from the north, and Dyirbal, which entered from the south. It also pays attention to Ja:bugay, Yidin's northerly relative, and Warrgamay, Dyirbal's southerly neighbour. There is discussion of how the languages have influenced each other in terms of demonstratives and related items, tense system, pronoun system, initial rhotic, and contrastive vowel length. In each instance, the likely direction of diffusion is examined.' [Authors abstract]

Annotation: "During the 1970s a wave of 'counter-culture' people moved into rural communities in many parts of Australia. This study focuses in particular on the town of Kuranda in North Queensland and the relationship between the settlers and the local Aboriginal population, concentrating on a number of linked social dramas that portrayed the use of both public and private space. Through their public performances and in their everyday spatial encounters, these people resisted the bureaucratic state but, in the process, they also contributed to the cultivation and propagation of state effects."--publisher website.
