ONE PENNY.

A Political Plot.

For a long time past we have warned the people against the machinations of political Messalas and constitutional gentry who pose a "Lead Kindy Lighters' by anti-political Messalas and constitutional gentry who pose as "Lead Kindy Lighters' by anti-political sunst pale into insignificance before the getting of the machinal content of the political sunst pale into insignificance before the gettings of Ministers during the last month.

A year ago if an Li W.W. man said there was no fundamental difference between the two political parties the allivies amilied contemptuously, yet the Referenda is hardly over before we see the spectacle of Ministers who had hitterly denounced each other for years gather together like last brothers under the banner of nationalism. The way a mottley erwor of discredited coercionists and conscriptionists join forces and try to prolong the life of Parliament—make certain of their billets—is enough to make Dr. Johnstone trum in his grave. He once said: "Parliament—make see that the best in the light of the property of the property

NEWS AND NOTES.

Mr. J. S. Shirlaw, of 115 Palmer-street. Wool-moolos, writes to the effect that he is a firm like us in Childley's doctrines, and intends to me a society to remise Childrey's ideal. He ill be pleased to hear from sympathisers who als to further this object.

The "Daily Telegraph" of Nov. 7th published a cartoon by Hal. Eyre, entitled "How Long Is This To Go On?" It depicted a mining magnate and a miner wrangling over a figure termed Industry.

The above cartoon by Dick Nolan is an answer to the "Telegraph's" cartoon

"WHEN THE WHISLTE BLOWS FOR THE BOSS TO GO TO WORK."

Economic Bluff.

THE "PASS-IT-ON" BOGEY.

(A. Mack)

As smo as the workers seek better working conditions, shorter hours of labour or bigger wages, the capitalist press comes along with their "Passitant" argument. The coal strike had converly commenced before laby trotted out the diev warning that in the event of defeat the coal owners would have no alternative but to pass the increased dest of production on to the public.

The object of this argument is, we suppose, to sow discord among the strikers by leading them to believe that better conditions or better wages are in reality of no advantage to them because the egythiatists are able to manipulate the prices of commedities in such a way that the burden of any cetar costs will eventually fall on the workers themselves.

the burden of any extra costs will eventually-fall on the workers themselves.

According to this argument the prices of commodities depend upon the winn of the '9bose', and when we realise this supreme power in his hands we cannot but feel grateful at his moderation; were he at all despotic and selfish he might give prices a hitch up whenever he needed a new automobile or felt inclined for a trip round the world. This looks very well for the captains of industry, but we should like to know why they always fight like helt to defeat any why they always fight like helt to defeat any examined of the prices of the captains of industry, but we should like to know why they always fight like helt to defeat any areas of the captains of industry, but we should like to know have been as the control of the control of the other her worly can be an need to dispute questions of wages, hours or conditions with the workers. All they have to do is to great the domains, and then back through another channel. By observing the attitude of the employing-class towards workers asking for better wages, etc., one is egit to come to the conclusion that THEY are themselves not nearly as convinced as the papers appear to be, that they can pass the carts costs along to some one cited.

The Workers' Outlook

For six weary years I have looked out on this forlors strip of desert—for six weary years without a break in my isolation.

I, who love life, Joyous and free, have, for six weary years, known the pelvations of a poetup animal and of an inwelling reduce. Down there at the water's edge is the nice cous cement factory whose maddening routine of dull tasks has sucked in my soul, light here, a little removed from the factory, are the colony houses.

They pass one another wan scattery a too, of recognition.

Are these men? And in this living?

There are little thaths from the houses to the factory. I have worn my dusy futte path from my whack straight to the factory
