Unclaimed Funds

ADVERTISING SUPPLEMENT

Get the cash that's coming to you

Are you one of thousands of New Yorkers with unclaimed funds?

What are unclaimed funds?

Perhaps you forgot to cash a check, overpaid a bill, or didn't know you were the beneficiary of a long-lost relative's life insurance policy. There are many reasons why you may be owed money and not be aware. That is why banks, insurance companies, courts, corporations and other organizations are required by law to attempt notify you by mail and publish information regarding unclaimed property in the newspaper.

What happens to unclaimed property?

Organizations have between one and five years to try to reunite account holders with their property, depending on the state and industry. After that "dormancy period," the funds are turned over the state. Every state (except Iowa and Indiana) will hold on to unclaimed funds indefinitely, just waiting for you to file a claim.

How to find lost money:

Search for your name—and your family members', going back a generation or two—in the published listings, grouped by reporting organization. Additionally, you can visit www.unclaimedmoney.org, where you will find links to search each state's database along with filing instructions.

How to claim your money:

At the end of each company's listing, you'll find instructions on how to file your claim. You can contact the company directly or visit their website for more details. Each organization and state will have their own process for returning your money.

Unclaimed funds facts:

- As of February 2017, there are more than 35 million unclaimed accounts recorded in New York State, totaling $14.5 billion.
- Last year, New York State returned a record $452 million, across 421,000 accounts.
- While the average claim amount is less than $100, the largest individual account yet to be claimed holds more than $1.7 million — could it be yours?
- There is no fee to reclaim funds from the state, but private companies can charge up to a 15 percent finder's fee.
