Is the custom of giving the name of any natural object to a man or woman common, and on the death of the person so named is the word disused and another substituted to indicate such natural object?—Yes, very common ; but never changed after death.

Such a custom, it is said, leads to great alterations in the language ; are there any other obvious causes in operation leading to changes in the names of things ?—None.

YARRA TRIBE.

The following vocabulary of the language of the tribe of Aborigines inhabiting the River Yarra, and a few short sentences in the native tongue, with translations, were compiled by Mr. John Green, the Inspector of Aboriginal Stations in Victoria.

At that time there were a great many men, women, and children, but now there are but few of us. But since we began to settle and live in our own houses, we have improved much.

We are now happier, and glad to see so many children about us.

Some are coming home; they are now tired of the bush.

because nearly all the trees and plants here named by the natives can now be easily identified.

It will be observed that in some cases the natives have given different names to the same plant. Great care was taken by my correspondents, and I cannot believe that any error has crept in. It is not improbable that there are, in the same tribe, more names than one for a plant, and that a plant in one stage of development may have a different name when it is in another stage.

In Mr. Green's list, Wetomellen (No. 2), collected by Mrs. Green, is not to be distinguished from Minamberang (No. 63), collected by Mr. Green; and No. 30 (Mervan) is exactly like No. 31 (Ngaring).

I point out these apparent discrepancies, not to lessen the value of the work, but to increase it. Probably Mr. and Mrs. Green had not with them on every occasion the same native; and a native might on one occasion give the name of the foliage, on another that of the fruit, and on another perhaps that of the root. It is exceedingly difficult to procure information from the natives with respect to these matters; but I am satisfied that the work has been done with every regard to accuracy.

The collection of plants and the list of native names received from the Rev. Mr. Hartmann are of more than ordinary value. He has taken the greatest care in performing the work; and his abilities and his education are sufficient guarantees that it is accurate, and as complete as one man, with other heavy duties to attend to, could make it.

The contributions of the Managers of the Stations are not alone of importance as showing what names the natives give to plants; but the plants having been gathered in the several localities specified at the head of each list, something is added to our knowledge of the geographical distribution of some species; and even from a strictly botanical point of view are worthy of preservation.

Plants, with native names, received from Mr. John Green, of Coranderrk:—
(Examined and named by Baron von Mueller, C.M.G., F.R.S., Government Botanist, &c.)

No.	Native Name.	Identified by Baron von Mueller as—
1	Kurwan - - - - -	Bursaria spinosa . Cavanilles.

48	Berry yung - - - - -	Acacia stricta . Willdenow.

* More like Kadthekadthek.

† Mr. Green states that the natives eat this plant, and probably the roots afford them food in certain seasons. "Hypochæris, Seriola, Robertia, &c., form Lessing's sub-tribe Hypochæridæ. Swine are said to be fond of the roots of Hypochæris radicata, the long rooted cat's-ear, whence indeed its generic name."—Burnett, p. 936.

It is not referred to in Hooker's Flora Ciliaria as given in his great work on the Flora of Tasmania.
