

Our Cover . . .

This old aboriginal, photographed at Tibooburra, is King Millar, one of the Wilson River Tribe (Queensland). With him is John Jorgenson, son of the local constable.

There are only five other members of this tribe left now, and they are scattered all over the country.

When asked his age, he replied, "about a hundred".

King Millar, who is a jovial old fellow, lives with his wife Alice on the Tibooburra reserve, and is particularly proud of the plate which the Queensland Aboriginal Protection Board gave him.

He tells that once his tribe was a very large one. In his early days he worked as a stockman, but in his later days he contented himself by going from waterhole to waterhole, hunting and fishing.

Both he and his wife can still speak their native dialect and use it when they are together.

•

Dawn is a monthly magazine published by the Aborigines of the Welfare Board for the aboriginal people of New South Wales.

Editor: E. Colin Davis, F.R.E.S.

•

In this issue . . .

	Page.
Canadian Authority Likes Dawn	1
Our Roving Cameraman	2
The Magic Carpet . . . back to Cumeroogunga ...	4
Homes Can be Bought	4
Killing Pests doesn't always pay	5
Now You Know (Feature)	6
Aboriginal King Dies	6
The Bible and Shakespeare for Aborigines ...	7
They Say	8
A Date with Cupid	9
New Batch of Exemption Certificates	9
Along the Mail Route	10
Death of Bill Simms	10
Home Hints	11
Yes! They Have Some Bananas	12
Pot-Pourri Again (L. N. Briggs Special) ...	14
Aborigines Proud of New Church	15
Why All the Animals peck at the Owl	16
Bursaries for 1955	17
The Nolan Family from Dubbo	18
Caroona Notes	18
Watch that Gun!	19
Pete's Page	20
Korky the Cat (Cartoon)	Inside Back Cover.
In the Garden	Back Cover.