

Michael's Seeing the Sea

Michael Jarrett joined the Navy in March, 1965, and he has seen quite a lot of sea, and land, since then. He certainly likes the Navy life because he has just signed on for nine years.

Michael, the grandson of Mrs M. Jarrett of Corindi-Clarence, has served on the Melbourne, the Sydney, and at present is on the Moresby. He has visited New Guinea, New Zealand, many islands in the Pacific, and went with troops to Vietnam.

He attended Grafton High School—travelling 56 miles a day in the school bus—and on leaving school, joined the Navy in Brisbane.

Michael has completed two years as marine engineer, and, according to his grandmother, his present rating is M.E.D.

Above: Michael Jarrett (in uniform) at Corindi-Clarence with his friends (left to right) Michael McDougal, and Cecil and Bruce Runner

Right: Michael doing signal duty at Sydney's Garden Island naval base

