CULTURAL SENSITIVITY STATEMENT

It is a condition of use of this finding aid, and of the collection described in it, that users ensure that any use of the information contained in it is sympathetic to the views and sensitivities of relevant Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples. This includes:

Language

Users are warned that this finding Aid may contain words and descriptions which may be culturally sensitive and which might not normally be used in certain public or community contexts. Terms and descriptions which reflect the author's attitude, or that of the period in which the manuscript was written, and which may be considered inappropriate today in some circumstances, may also be used.

Deceased persons

Users of this finding aid should be aware that, in some Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Communities, seeing images of deceased persons in photographs, film and books or hearing them in recordings etc may cause sadness or distress and, in some cases, offend against strongly held cultural prohibitions.

COLLECTION OVERVIEW

Scope and content note

This record group of Charles Rowley's papers is divided into two main sections: Rowley's personal and professional papers; and records of surveys of Aboriginal households carried out under Rowley's auspices.

Rowley's personal and professional papers are arranged chronologically, as far as possible following the course of his career. The main record series are Rowley's journals and field notes, his correspondence, research project papers, his own published and unpublished manuscripts, and the documents that he collected.

Rowley stated that his field of scholarship was 'in colonial and Australian social history and politics, specializing in the area of race relations' (Rowley to Birrell, c.1984, draft, MS 3775/9/14). Rowley's papers document his research on the administration of Indigenous affairs in Papua New Guinea, South-East Asia and North America, as well as in Australia. They cover a broad range of subjects, but focus on living conditions of Australian Aborigines (on settlements and reserves, in country towns and in urban environments), labour relations and land rights.

Rowley's papers also record aspects of the policies and programs of the institutions that he worked for, the Australian School of Pacific Administration, the Social Science Research Council, the University of Papua New Guinea, and Aboriginal Land Fund Commission, and the ANU and AIAS, and his interactions with colleagues at those institutions and elsewhere.

The second section of this record group holds records of surveys of living conditions of Aboriginal families, consisting of administrative papers, detailed questionnaire returns, and some data entry sheets. The first series of surveys were made in NSW, SA, and WA, in the mid 1960s as part of the study of Aborigines in Australian society, directed by Rowley, under the auspices of the Social Science Research Council of Australia¹. Follow-up surveys carried out in NSW in country towns in 1980 and in Sydney in 1984, aimed at establishing what changes had occurred over the intervening years, were made with financial and administrative support from the Australian Institute of Aboriginal Studies, the Commonwealth Department of Education, and assistance from the Australian National University and the Department of Aboriginal Affairs.

Provenance

Part of the collection was deposited in the AIATSIS Library by Professor Rowley prior to his death, and the remainder transferred to AIATSIS after his death in 1985, with the permission of his widow, Mrs Irene Rowley.

Material separated from collection

MS 3775, Rowley collection: personal papers, unaccessioned photographs held in Pictorial Archive. Contents include black and white prints from second Panguna Seminar (19-21 October, 1971); black and white prints courtesy of Bougainville Copper Pty Ltd (c.1970); black and white prints from book launch (Outcasts in White Australia, 1971); black and white prints taken during 'arts and crafts fair' in Bangkok (December 1954); bromides of pictures taken during the implementation of the Act of Free Choice, West Irian (July-August, 1969).

Archivist's note

This finding aid is derived from a summary box list of Professor Rowley's papers made by Pat Brady in November 2005. As far as possible, documents held within files have been retained in their original order. As the original sequence of Professor Rowley's personal and professional records had been disrupted it was found necessary to impose an order based on his career progression. The order of the records of the various Aboriginal household surveys has been maintained.

Charles Dunford Rowley (1905-1985) was born and grew up in central western NSW where he attended bush schools at Windeyer and Dunedoo, and high schools at Mudgee and Cowra. He enrolled at Sydney University in 1923 graduating in English and History in 1926 with 1st class honours. He played first grade rugby league and boxed.

Rowley taught at government high schools in rural NSW from 1928 to 1938. He married Irene Klingner in Brisbane in December 1934. In 1939 Rowley completed an MA in History at Sydney University, with 1st class honours, submitting a thesis, Discovery of the Clarence Port, and was appointed a lecturer at Sydney Teachers' College. In 1942 Rowley joined the Australian Imperial Force, where he rose to the rank of Lieutenant Colonel, Australian Army Education Service, New Guinea Force.

Released from the AIF in January 1946, Rowley held senior positions with the Australian Universities Commission and in 1949 became Chief Education Officer (Adult Education Publications) in the Commonwealth Office of Education. In that capacity he attended a UNESCO World Conference on Adult Education held in Denmark in 1949. Adult education was one of the main themes of Rowley's working life. For example, in 1954-55 Rowley made a 3-month study of adult and workers' education for UNESCO and the ILO in Thailand, Cambodia, Vietnam, Laos, the Philippines and Indonesia².

From 1950 to 1964 Rowley was Principal of the Australian School of Pacific Administration at Mosman in Sydney. ASOPA trained patrol officers, teachers and other colonial administrators for duty in Papua New Guinea. In 1957 its brief was extended by the Commonwealth Department of Territories to include training of officials in the Northern Territory. In 1959 Rowley received a Carnegie grant to undertake a study of cross-cultural administration of Canadian Indian affairs³. Rowley published the results of his North American study in Oceania in 1962. His article attacked assimilation of Aborigines and suggested reforms of Aboriginal policy, including: transfer of land and other property to Aboriginal control; formation of Aboriginal Councils to manage their assets; development of Aboriginal businesses and managerial skills; redirection of welfare from control to community development and community building; and development of appreciation by all Australians of the cultural heritage of Aborigines⁴.

From April 1964 until April 1968 Rowley directed a study of Aborigines in Australian Society sponsored by the Social Science Research Council of Australia (SSRC), its most ambitious project up to that date. The project staff gathered and organised research materials, and made the indexes to it, which comprise the group of Rowley's papers held at MS 5014. They also carried out surveys of Aboriginal households in NSW and South Australia, and a survey of Aboriginal labour on pastoral stations in Western Australia, the records of which are held in this collection (MS 3775).

Based on the material gathered for the research project, Rowley wrote three seminal books on the contemporary situation of Australian Aborigines which were published as Aboriginal Policy

² Rowley's journal and his reports on the survey are held in MS 3775/Series 12.

³ Rowley's report on his North American tour and related papers are held at MS 3775/21/5 & 6.

MS 3775: C.D. Rowley, Personal and professional papers and records of Aboriginal household surveys, 1937-1986 and Practice, Volumes I-III: The destruction of Aboriginal society (1970), Outcasts in white Australia (1971) and The remote Aborigines (1971). Those three volumes and ten others produced by participants in the research project were published by the Australian National University Press in the series, Aborigines in Australian Society.

In May 1968 Charles Rowley took up the position of Professor of Political Studies at the newly established University of Papua New Guinea in Port Moresby when the country and its people were finding their way towards independence. Among other projects, Professor Rowley organised the 4th Waigani Seminar, on the politics of Melanesia, held in Port Moresby in May 1970⁵, and a survey of the operations of local government councils in Bougainville at the time when production at the Panguna copper mine was well underway.

In 1974 Professor Rowley returned to Canberra, where he served until February 1979⁶ as Executive-Director of the Academy of the Social Sciences in Australia (formerly, the SSRC). Concurrently, in 1975 he was appointed by the Federal Labor government as Chairman of the newly formed Aboriginal Land Fund Commission, authorised to buy pastoral properties for Aboriginal people to develop. The Commission was progressively wound down by the Fraser government until it was abolished in 1980. Rowley attacked the Fraser government for lack of commitment to land rights in his A matter of Justice (1978).

In retirement Professor Rowley pursued his research and writing on Aborigines in Australian society as a Visiting Fellow at the Australian National University from 1979 until December 1981, where he organized follow-up a survey of living conditions of Aboriginal households in rural NSW and Sydney, following up on his 1965 survey, the records of which are in this collection (MS 3775)⁷.

In 1982 Rowley was appointed Visiting Fellow and at the Australian Institute of Aboriginal Studies where he advocated reconciliation and restitution and was an active member of the Aboriginal Treaty Committee. He chastised the Hawke government for procrastination in Recovery: the politics of Aboriginal land reform (1986), which was in-press when Rowley died.

Rowley was still working at the Institute of Aboriginal Studies, writing an account of his extensive field studies of Aborigines in the Sydney area, when he fell ill. From the Institute building Rowley "could see the land that a great grandfather had farmed not long after the first interracial encounter beside the Molonglo River" (Inglis).

Charles Rowley died on 18 September 1985.
