N.M.E. REVIEW - KEITH ALTHAM OCT 1968
 Scott walked without ceremony in casual jeans and hat. His manner and voice are now much praised and his rendition of "Jackie" now holds his caught that how which was certainly compare Bark's intention. The Ronnie Scott band played competently and robustly, as one would expect, better than both the seems like inspiration in the arrangements and I would give a lot to hear just a few strings behind the voice. "Make It Easy On Yourself" was received with warm applause and the few isolated screams which punctuated the dark were hardly "altruistic". "Main Street Mission" & the singer, which does not quite, and "Jazzin'" & the beautiful ballad which appeared to become a standard. Both were beautifully performed. "TV Co. Co. Jerry" really requires a more intimate atmosphere than the vast Astoria affairs, but to his credit Scott managed to create his own with that boundary voice and a single acoustic guitar. Finally there was "Amsterdam" and we were left feeling slightly cheated that there was no more, and that for real "Scott" fans, there had been nothing new.
