As this magazine has demonstrated since 1986, monitoring the contributions of pro-Israel political action committees (PACs) to House and Senate candidates is critical to identifying which members of Congress may be working to protect the interests of a foreign country, rather than of their own constituents. (Perhaps this is the time to bid farewell to the Senate's two top career recipients, who are not running for re-election this year: Carl Levin of Michigan and Iowa's Tom Harkin.)

Particularly in open seat races, however, where there is no incumbent, it can be equally important to identify the good guys and gals who are not receiving pro-

Janet McMahon is managing editor of the Washington Report on Middle East Affairs.

Israel contributions. A case in point: South Dakota, where Democrat Rick Weiland, a former congressional aide and regional director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, is running a populist campaign against former Gov. Mike Rounds for the seat being vacated by Sen. Tim Johnson. Weiland, who is in the midst of a second visit to all of South Dakota's 311 towns, is campaigning against big money, and has received no pro-Israel PAC contributions-and little support from the national Democratic Party. Rounds, on the other hand, announced his intention to raise a $9 million campaign warchest. (Weiland informed supporters in May that the median contribution to his campaign was $9.)

While Rounds has received a relatively modest $7,500 in campaign contributions from pro-Israel PACs, his words and actions attest to the object of his affections. In May of last year he and his wife visited the self-proclaimed Jewish state with South Dakota State Sen. Stan Adelstein-one of 345 Jewish citizens in the state, according to the Jewish Virtual Library, or less than .1 percent of the would-be senator's constituents. That August Rounds attended a pro-Israel event in New Jersey hosted by NORPAC-one of some two dozen deceptively named pro-Israel PACs. "His visit reaffirmed his belief that U.S. aid to Israel and supporting her against hostile nations is critical to our nation's foreign policy," reported The Jewish Link of Bergen County. "He further stated that Jerusalem should be officially recognized as the capital of Israel and that the administration should comply with the Jerusalem Embassy Act of 1995 which would relocate the U.S. Embassy to Israel's capital."

Weiland has been focusing more on domestic issues—although some clearly have international implications as well. On the back of his business card are the words of a constitutional amendment Weiland vows to introduce on his first day in the Senate: "So that the votes of all, rather than the wealth of the few, shall direct the course of this Republic, Congress shall have the power to limit the raising and spending of money with respect to federal elections."

Could Weiland's call for campaign finance reform explain his lack of support from Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid (D-NV) and other members of the Democratic establishment?

Rewarding Pro-Israel Incumbents

In Kentucky, Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell clearly is the favored candidate, with $41,500 so far in pro-Israel PAC contributions. Indeed, with the departure of Levin and Harkin at the end of the year, McConnell is slated to become the senator with the highest career total in pro-Israel PAC contributions—assuming he is re-elected. There does seem to be some support for his Democratic opponent, Kentucky Secretary of State Alison Lundergan Grimes, half McConnell's age (and "not an empty dress"), as evidenced by a token $4,000 contribution. McConnell has raised a total of more than $21 million, according to the Center for Responsive Politics, to Grimes' $8 million. At the end of May he led her by 7 points in public opinion polls.

The situation in Hawaii is a bit more complicated. There, following the death of Sen. Daniel Inouye, Gov. Neil Abercrombie ignored Inouye's expressed wish that he appoint Rep. Colleen Hanabusa to fill his seat. Instead the governor, a former 10-term congressman himself, appointed Lt. Gov. Brian Schatz to complete Inouye's term. Hanabusa is challenging Schatz in the Aug. 9 primary prior to the Nov. 4 special election to fill out the remaining two years of Inouye's term. Hawaii being a heavily blue state, the winner of the primary is likely to win the special election.

As of mid-June, Schatz had raised twice as much campaign money as Hanabusa: more than $4 million compared to Hanabusa's $2 million. Pro-Israel PACs have been even more generous to the incumbent, giving Hanabusa a nominal $9,500 vs. $30,700 to Schatz—almost enough to make him one of the top 10 recipients of pro-Israel PAC money for this year's election. As of mid-May he was leading Hanabusa by 15 points in opinion polls, according to the Honolulu Civil Beat.

Unlike South Dakota's Rick Weiland, Schatz has the enthusiastic support of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee (DSCC), the Civil Beat reported. "That not only opens fund-raiser doors for the senator," Nathan Gonzales of the Rothenberg Political Report explained, "but it closes fund-raiser doors for Hanabusa, making it more difficult for her to raise money. That is one thing the DSCC can do is tell some of their biggest donors, 'You need to get involved with Schatz.'"

Hawaii's senior senator, who was sworn in on Dec. 27, 2012, didn't waste much time in making his support for Israel known. Two months later Schatz joined 16 members of Congress and Israel's then-Ambassador Michael Oren at an Iron Dome Tribute Luncheon in the Russell Senate Office Building. Congress has generously allocated almost $300 million of American taxpayers' money to fund Israel's shortrange missile defense system.

"This Jewish kid from the state of Hawaii vows to continue [Inouye's] legacy of support for Israel," Schatz said at the Feb. 27, 2013 event, held days before the government sequestration took effect. "My commitment to Israeli security is firmly grounded in public policy and the interests of Israel and the interests of the United States, but it is also a personal one. With the sequester looming and deep defense cuts coming, Congress must act. My colleagues must come together once again and protect funding for critical programs such as this. The resources needed to guarantee American and Israeli security cannot be subject to political partisanship. We as a nation must do what is right and guarantee the security of Israel and the United States of America."

Perhaps Israel's American-born ambassador put it most succinctly. Declared Oren, "Behind the Iron Dome stands a marble dome: the Capitol of the United States of America."

Ain't it the truth. Increasingly, however, American voters may want to elect members of Congress who put their own country's Capitol Dome ahead of a foreign nation's Iron Dome. \Box
