

Beauty

*must be defined as
what we are,
or else the concept itself
is our enemy.*

*To see beauty is simply to learn the
private language of
meaning which is
another's life—
to recognize and relish what is.*

*Why languish in the shadow of a standard
we cannot personify, an ideal we cannot live?*

