'I'm Dying Up Here' returns for season 2

Standup comedy is hard, and it's definitely not for everyone. It takes a special someone to bare it all and try to make a crowd full of strangers laugh. Accurate depictions of stand-up comedy and comedians on the big and small screen are arguably even harder to pull off, but "I'm Dying Up Here" seems to have finally succeeded where many have failed before. The highs and lows of those trying to make it big in Hollywood continue in the second-season premiere of the comedy-drama, airing Sunday, May 6, on Showtime.

"I'm Dying Up Here" is hardly the first series to examine comedians working on their craft, but such shows generally tend to be over-the-top portrayals of behind-the-scenes antics. Fan favorites such as "30 Rock" and "The Larry Sanders Show" depict how comedy shows come together, but not the grueling lives of the comedians who work on them.

Based on the 2010 best-selling book by William Knoedelseder, the series produced by Jim Carrey ("Man on the Moon," 1999) explores the famed Los Angeles standup scene of the 1970s and follows a group of young comedians attempting to make it big by performing on Johnny Carson's "The Tonight Show." Before they can go mainstream, however, these up-and-coming comics must succeed at Goldie's comedy club.

When we were first introduced to Goldie (Melissa Leo, "The Fighter," 2010) and the club that bears her name last season, they were on top of the comedy world. Her club was the place to be, and through her in-your-face toughness, encouragement and mentoring, she helped rising stars gain confidence and succeed, as we saw with fresh-faced Boston buds Eddie (Michael Angarano, "Sky High," 2005) and Ron (Clark Duke, "Hot Tub Time Machine," 2010). She also helped the comics get sitcom roles, radio gigs and other solid work, but by the end of the season, Goldie and her club were in a downward spiral.

The first season finished in a literal blaze of glory when rival club, King Theodore's, was burned to the ground, and the new season picks up in the aftermath of the fire. Leading up to it, we saw many comics, including superstar in the making, Adam (RJ Cyler, "Power Rangers," 2017), desert Goldie's for Teddy's due to the former's policy of not paying comics.

The new season addresses the deserters and also explores Nick's (Jake Lacy, "Girls") sobriety and its influence on his new act. Will audiences accept his new, raw act, and, more importantly, will he manage to stay on the wagon? Cassie's (Ari Graynor, "Bad Teacher") television pilot, "Girls Are Funny, Too," is once again a focal point of the new season. Additionally, we will see if Ralph (Erik Griffin, "Workaholics") finally starts to incorporate his time in Vietnam into his act and transition into a more topical comic in the politically charged post-Watergate climate.

The second season promises a bevy of guest stars but also several new characters who play an important role in the lives of Goldie's comics. The ever-talented Brad Garrett ("Everybody Loves Raymond") is set for a season-long arc as Roy Martin, a veteran and comedy legend. Throughout the season, he will impart his wisdom on the young comics and, much like Goldie, he doesn't shy away from dropping hurtful truth bombs and breaking a few spirits. Trying to recover from her downward spiral, Goldie tries to form a business partnership with the old pro in order to expand her comedy presence.

Making a particularly inopportune arrival this season is Goldie's 17-year-old estranged and troubled daughter, Amanda (Stefania LaVie Owen, "Chance"), who reappears in her mother's life after running away from home. Sure to cause trouble elsewhere is Gloria Whitfield (Nicole Ari Parker, "Time After Time"), a recently divorced, successful producer of the hit series "Soul Train" who becomes romantically involved with one of the comics.

Trying to make waves is Dawn Lima (Xosha Roquemore, "The Mindy Project"), a fearless preacher's daughter who has something to prove to herself and the world. She's recently arrived to L.A. after performing in Chicago and Detroit and finds herself struggling with her sexual identity.

Dana Gould ("Stan Against Evil") is set to recur as Bruce, Adam's alpha-male agent who doesn't understand comedy or artistic integrity and is solely motivated by money. After the events of last season, Adam is in a very precarious position, and his agent can make or break him. Saul Hudson (Beau Mirchoff, "Awkward") joins Bruce as an ancillary power player. A friend of Ralph's, he's a wannabe playboy and the son of a comic who is now a television producer.

New drama 'Vida' is a breath of fresh air

By Andrew Warren
TV Media

So dramatic: It doesn't take much for one's world to get turned upside down. The death of a loved one, a shocking revelation about a family member or even a rapidly changing neighborhood can do it in a flash, but when all three of those influences happen at once, it's definitely a recipe for some juicy storytelling.

Enter "Vida," a bold new half-hour drama that premieres on Starz on Sunday, May 6. In a TV landscape dominated by hour-long dramas, the bite-sized pieces that the new series comes in could bring a breath of fresh air to a genre steeped in — well, drama.

Mishel Prada and Melissa Barrera lead the cast as a pair of estranged sisters brought back into each other's life by their mother's tragic death. Both actresses are relatively new faces: "The Walking Dead" fans may recognize the former as one of the stars of former web series "Fear the Walking Dead: Passage," and Barrera's credits include Mexican telenovellas "Siempre Tuya Acapulco" and "Tanto Amor."

The two estranged sisters, returning to their childhood home on the east side of Los Angeles, find the world they once knew changing rapidly. Not only is their mother gone, but when they meet her longtime "roommate," Eddy (Ser Anzoategui, "East Los High"), they discover that there was a side of their mom that they never even suspected.

Set against the backdrop of a rapidly gentrifying neighborhood and its long-established Hispanic population's resistance to change, "Vida" is an exploration and a celebration of the rejection of the stereotypes that exist about any community. In an age when there's no shortage of hour-long dramas, "Vida" is a 30-minute treat with a strong social message and a voice that refuses to be silenced. The new series premieres Sunday, May 6, on Starz.

Q: I am a big fan of "Cold Justice" and was happy to hear that Oxygen had picked up the series. I am unhappy, though, that so far the station has just been airing reruns, with an occasional new show. I know it stopped airing initially due to a lawsuit. What's the deal now?

A: There are a couple of "deals" going on with "Cold Justice's" new place on Oxygen, but neither is anything to worry about — the show's in good shape.

Your point about only getting "occasional" new episodes is a fair one — Oxygen is airing it on a somewhat more irregular schedule than it had on TNT, its previous channel, sometimes letting weeks pass between episodes.

It's also airing fewer of them. TNT aired three seasons of the show before canceling it in 2015, and the third season was a whopping 24 episodes long. The show's fourth season, which aired last summer on Oxygen, had just 10 episodes.

You shouldn't take that as a lack of commitment from the network, however. Kelly Siegler, the crusading former prosecutor who is the star of the show, announced back in February that she was "hard at work" on new episodes for a fifth season.

Indeed, "Cold Justice" was something of a flagship show for Oxygen's big rebranding exercise last year. Having began life as a women's network, it took a hard turn last year toward true crime, and the revival of "Cold Justice" was one of the first new-brand shows it announced.

Q: Can you tell me what's going on with "Shades of Blue"?

A: Surprisingly, I can, but once I do, you might wish I didn't.

In a somewhat rare move, NBC officially announced the cancellation of "Shades of Blue," which stars pop star Jennifer Lopez. Usually a network would simply not renew the show and leave fans wondering, so this is technically a kindness.

However, it came with a more unambiguous bit of good news, too: there's still one season left of the show. It premieres in June.

Together, these things likely add up to a conclusive ending to the show. If the network is announcing the cancellation already, it likely told the writers about it even earlier, so that they'd be able to write an end to the story of this tight-knit family of Brooklyn cops, centered around Lopez's dedicated detective and single mom, Harlee Santos.

Indeed, Lopez herself gave an enigmatic hint about that ending in an official news release.

"We crafted a poetic three-season arc on how her journey ends, which is true redemption. The way only Harlee could have done it — the hard way, the road less traveled."

Timeless

wcsh 10:00 p.m.

When the team travels through time and space to the day President Reagan was shot in 1981, they discover that the president wasn't the real target. In fact, the Sleeper was aiming for Agent Christopher (Sakina Jaffrey), who brought the Time Team together.

I'm Dying Up Here

SHOW 10:00 p.m.

Goldie (Melissa Leo) hopes that legendary comedian Roy Martin (Brad Garrett) can help her expand her comedy empire in the season premiere of this drama set in the 1970s. Meanwhile, Cassie (Ari Graynor) waits for the premiere of her comedy special.

Matt Lanter in "Timeless"

Allison Janney and Anna Faris in "Mom"

Grey's Anatomy

WMTW 8:00 p.m.

When one of their own is seriously injured, the Grey Sloan Memorial family are forced to consider what's really important to them in this new episode. At the same time, Dr. Herman (Geena Davis) arrives with a proposition for Dr. Arizona (Jessica Capshaw).

Mom

WGME 9:00 p.m.

Christy (Anna Faris) and her mother Bonnie (Allison Janney) often clash, but they know they can rely on each other when the going gets tough in this comedy. Also starring Jaime Pressly and Mimi Kennedy, the show was recently picked up for a sixth season.

What's something sweet, delicious and oh so entertaining? Why, it's Monday nights on Food Network, of course! The first week-night is all about baking on the culinary channel, and things get even better with yet another baking show added to the mix starting Monday, May 7.

That night sees "Best Baker in America" return for a second season with a new host, new bakers and new recipes over which the contestants must prove their mastery.

Regular "Chopped" judge Scott Conant takes over hosting duties from last season's Adam Rapoport (editor of Bon Appétit magazine) this time around, lending his typically knowledgeable and witty observations to the tasks set before the bakers. He's joined by returning judges Jason Smith and Marcela Valladolid, both of whom certainly know their way around a kitchen full of sweets.

Unlike similar baking competitions, such as British import "The Great British Baking Show," "Best Baker in America" isn't out to find the best amateur baker. This show is looking for the best professional from among its contestants, and because of that, this series has no qualms about throwing some really tricky tasks at the group.

With nine contestants this time around, the judges have come up with some challenges that will really test their inventiveness and baking expertise. There are old school favorites, such as decadent Mont Blanc and sumptuous charlotte royale, to be baked, along with tricky treats that really test the bakers' techniques and attention to detail, such as petits fours and layered French meringue cakes.

The May 7 premiere is all about cakes, something that should be so easy to a professional baker that nothing could possibly go wrong ... right? Even if everything does go according to plan, one baker will be sent home, putting the rest of the contestants just one step closer to the coveted Best Baker title.

It all sounds so mouthwatering, and the rotating guest judges are the lucky ones who get to join in on the tasting. Acclaimed bakers Zac Young, Shinmin Li, Sherry Yard and Florian Bellanger all take a turn at tasting, along with baking digital influencers Joshua John Russell, Yolanda Gamp and Gemma Stafford.

"Best Baker in America" joins Food Network's Monday night baking bloc on May 7.
