

Does the Great Commission Apply to Me?

Are pastors the only ones who are obligated to obey the Great Commission? If you observe the workings of a typical church today it does appear so. Of course, there may be sermons designed to produce guilt in anyone not doing it, but little attention is given to training the sheep how to reproduce.

Some designated “altar workers” receive inquirers who may be coaxed down the aisle during an “altar call.” Formal training for these is rare, however. They are so designated because they stand out in the congregation as “mature Christians.”

Many churches are more church-centered rather than lost-centered. In conversations with some pastors it becomes apparent it is more important to get people to the church before, or instead of, getting

Are We Reaping What We Have Sown?

Sometimes whole nations receive the just rewards for their sin. But often they don't realize it.

There is currently much hand-wringing in the US about the looming insolvency of the Social Security system, designed to care for the elderly. Many people have the misconception that it is an “investment,” in which workers set aside money for their retirement.

In reality, it is a tax on young workers to pay for the monthly payments being made to retirees. It works great as long as you have lots more workers than retirees. But if you suddenly have them to Jesus. Members of that church are not focused on personally guiding someone to a commitment to Christ. Bring them to church and then the pastor can convert them.

Author David W. Daniels says that this may be partly caused by a change in the wording of the Great Commission in the modern Bibles. The preserved Bible, the King James, instructs us to go and “teach” or “preach” the gospel. But most of the modern versions say to “make disciples.” We are “commissioned” to go and present the gospel whether someone surrenders to the process of discipleship or not. Disciples are mostly seen to be made primarily in the church. But we are “commissioned” to go out to next-door and to the ends of the earth and simply present the gospel.

This puts the responsibility upon all of us. We can pass off the “discipling” to the church, but we cannot escape our part. In order to teach or preach, we must learn. We must know why we are committed to the Kingdom of God and be able to communicate it. That is what “witness” means: to testify of what God has done for us and what He is ready to do for anyone else.

Our own story is a powerful way to start sharing the gospel. But that should only be the beginning. Proverbs tells us to get knowledge and wisdom, which is a lifetime endeavor. If we pursue it, we will be increasingly useful to the Kingdom in obeying the Great Commission.

But wherever we are in the process, there is work to do. No one can opt out. That is the beauty of gospel tracts. No matter where we are in our own discipleship, we can still “teach” and “preach” even though we may not be ready to “make disciples.”

With one Chick tract you can both teach and preach. The booklet format provides 20 pages of teaching through an engaging story. Then there is room at the end for a full “altar call” so that there is no confusion on what the reader must do to get right with God.

a generation with too few workers to support far too many retirees, the system collapses. How did the US get into this situation? The answer may be all too obvious.

The generation that is getting ready to retire has legally arranged the murder of over 30 million young workers who should be age 20 or over now, and in the workforce when the “baby-boomers” are ready to collect their checks. Impossible, you say? No, they have done it with the blessing of the courts, and will soon pay the piper.

We don’t call it murder, of course. That sounds too, well... coarse. We have a better way of putting it. We call it “giving a woman control over her own body.” Then we kill her child by sucking his brains out by machine during birth, and declare that the child was never born. In fact, they claim he was never a child. Just an aborted fetus.

Now stop and think for a moment. What might be the condition of the Social Security Trust Fund if those 30 million children had grown up and taken their place in the workforce of America? If Social Security checks have to be reduced for the next generation, maybe they have no one to blame but themselves.

“Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap.” --Galatians 6:7

Evolution: No God Needed!

The theory of evolution is an attack on both God and the Bible. No God is needed if all life “evolved” from rock soup over billions of years. Man is just a highly complex mutant that accidentally appeared in a hostile universe.

This takes all accountability away, installing the “fittest” as the arbiter of all behavior. No moral law, no 10 Commandments, just wandering chemical organisms trying to figure out why we are here.

If evolution were true, then the Bible would be nothing more than an ancient and mythological fairy-book, merely one of many attempts by man to explain himself and his world.

Evolutionists now dream of a utopia where man’s “mutations” can be accelerated by biotechnology, eliminating disease, aging and poverty, creating “superhumans.”

Today, every person on the planet must choose in his own mind whether there is a God or not. Oddly enough, most come up with some kind of deity if they ignore, or haven’t heard about, the real Creator of the Bible.

The theory of evolution is only a phenomenon of the educated class in the Western World. And it has only been around for a couple hundred years.

Can the theory of evolution be anything else but a “strong delusion” like that detailed in 2 Thess. 2:11?

When godless humanists refused to believe the Bible, they had a problem until Charles Darwin published his On the Origin of Species. Here was the excuse they were looking for. No longer was a Creator necessary to explain the world.

Launching from the fact that random mutations caused variations within species, they proposed that such changes could also explain the differences between species. Now an amoeba could become a fish, could become a lizard, could become a bird, could become a monkey, could become a human—given enough time.

Today, the lie of evolution is the foundation delusion for godless politics, faithless government education, and the confusion of many who claim to be Bible believers.

Soul-winners need a thorough understanding of this anti-God belief which has become the foundation of the secular, humanist belief system of most of the Western cultures.

The Chick tract *Big Daddy?* and the inexpensive but very comprehensive book, *The Evolution Handbook*, can give you powerful information and ammunition to combat this insidious delusion. The tract uses an engaging story to expose some of the lies that support evolution. Anyone who has an honest desire for the truth will have to stop and think when they encounter this tract. *The Evolution Handbook* is just that. A true handbook must completely cover its subject to be of any use. With almost 1,000 pages of highly detailed information, it is the bargain of the century at $5.95.

God Comments on Lutheran Question

On August 19th, 2009 at 2 pm in the afternoon there was a very interesting meeting that took place at the Minneapolis convention center in Minneapolis, Minnesota. The national ELCA (Evangelical Lutheran Church of America), was scheduled to consider a “Proposed Social Statement on Human Sexuality.” The issue was whether practicing homosexual behavior should disqualify a person from the pastoral ministry.

Which then, very conveniently, opens up a Pandora’s Box of validation for pastors to

Why Would God Bother?

By Matthew C. Daniels

In 2012, Michael Gove, then England's Secretary of State for Education, announced a plan to send a King James Bible to every state school in England. The initiative met with mixed reactions. Some praised it, calling the King James Bible "a national treasure", "an important part of western cultural heritage", and "the single most influential literary work in the English language." Others were less than pleased. The National Secular Society claimed that schools were already "awash with Bibles" and that students would be better off with copies of Darwin's On the Origin of Species.

Andrew Zak Williams, writing for The New Statesman, questioned the value of the Bible. He concluded his article (titled, "the Trouble with the King James Bible") with the statement that the donated Bibles "should come with a slap in the face to those who think that it could possibly be the inspired and accurately-recorded Word of a loving God."

But what evidence did he cite for such a conclusion? We need look no further than two of the most popular arguments of modern liberal textual critics.

First, he attacked Mark 16:9-20 (the so-called "longer ending of Mark") as inauthentic. Then, citing agnostic New Testament scholar and textual critic Bart D. Ehrman, he went after 1st John 5:7-8, crucial verses supporting the biblical doctrine of the Godhead (the Father, Son and Holy Spirit as one).

These arguments have been ably answered in articles and books elsewhere (See *Answers to Your Bible Version Questions* by David W. Daniels, available from Chick Publications), but what is most striking about Williams' article is his question for believers, posed shortly after supposedly demolishing the text of the King James using the above arguments. Williams wrote, "Quite frankly, when you read the King James Bible, you have no way of knowing whether any particular line would have been in the original manuscripts. This poses an interesting question for those who believe that all scripture is God-breathed: if God was not going to preserve the original manuscripts, why would he have bothered to inspire them?"

This question demonstrates an important reason why we ought to cling to our belief in God's preserved words. Williams' question is legitimate, and one that is dismissed far too easily by Christians with opposing views, but it does not come from a place of faith. He obviously does not believe Jesus' guarantee in Matthew 24:35 that "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away."

The Bible itself is the foundation of our faith. When atheists or agnostics want to attack our faith in God, the legitimacy of the Bible as the very words of God is the first battle they choose.

As Psalm 11:3 says, "If the foundations be destroyed, what can the righteous do?"

You can make that foundation sure in your own heart by reading and believing God's preserved words in English, the King James Bible. You can also take advantage of the many resources that Chick Publications offers on the topic. Visit www.chick.com or call (909) 987 0771 for a free catalog.

Cleo Finds a Partner

I just wanted to share with you guys what I am doing with your Cleo tract! I'm training my puppy Thunder to be a therapy dog to visit hospitals. We practice by going to pet-friendly stores and a few extra places that let him in. Naturally, a big friendly dog wearing a vest that says "Ask to Pet" is the ultimate conversation starter!

Since so many people are curious about what Thunder is doing, I wrote up a pamphlet about training to be a therapy dog and put a Cleo tract inside of each one. We just got the tracts yesterday and I can't wait to start handing these out! Cleo is the perfect tract for this! At first I thought it'd be about a shelter dog being adopted, which would still be great, but we got Thunder as a little puppy from a breeder and I didn't want it to look like he was a rescue—I was so tickled when I read the tracts! Cleo's personality reminds me of Thunder. ;) Anyway, just wanted to let you know another way your tracts are being used. May God bless you for all you are doing for Him!

In Christ's love, Kassie A. age 17

So Many Ways —So Little Time

There are different scenarios available to the soul-winner who seriously considers including Chick tracts in his witnessing.

The easiest is just to sneak one onto some place where it will be found later. Leaving one with the tip at a restaurant table or near the drink machine works this way. The message patiently waits for discovery. It takes about the same amount of time to fill a gas tank as it does to read a tract, if the driver discovers a tract rolled up under the trigger of the gas hose nozzle.

The next level is direct contact. Exchanging a tract for the receipt with a cashier at Starbucks or the Dollar Store requires a little more preparation. But we often patronize the same store over and over and always being ready with a different tract drives the good news deeper into the person's awareness.

Many Chick customers achieve the next level: buying case lots of tracts and handing them out in the middle of a river of pedestrians near a mall, school, or sporting event. One brave soul stood at a stop light and offered one to each waiting driver. It can't be any more dangerous than it is for the panhandlers who use this technique.

Besides having a tract ready, it helps to use some related comment. Favorites include:

"Have you seen one of these?" If no, then: "You may have it." If yes, then: "I have a different one. Would you like it?"

"Here is a great little story for your break time."

"Everyone who smiles at me today gets one of these." (This works best when their smile is in response to the one you gave them.)

One man I know who is six-foot four uses: "Everyone over (or under) six feet tall gets one of these, today."

"Everyone wearing a Dodgers cap gets one of these." Or any other identifiable item the person is wearing.

Sometimes the title of the tract provides a line:

"How's your trip going?" works for *The Long Trip* tract.

"Are you living the good life?" for *This Was Your Life*.

The sky's the limit on this kind of creativity. It should let the person know that the tract is free and a gift to them.

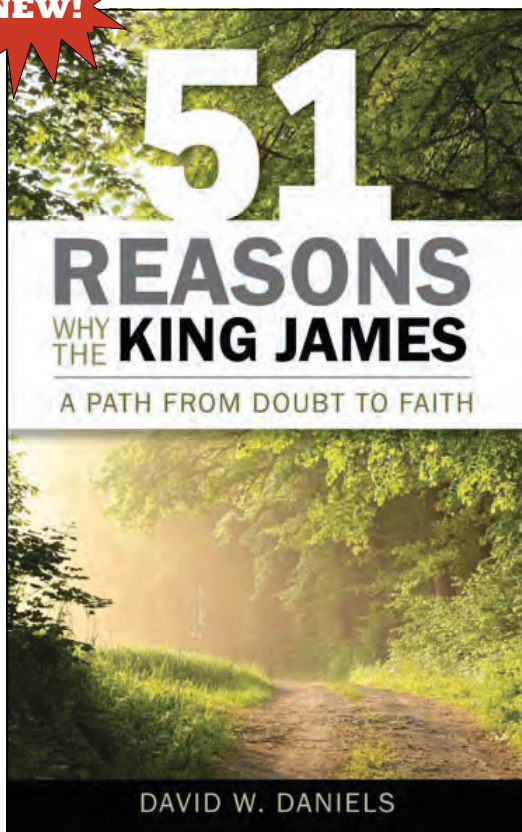

Today, some have the opinion that this kind of "evangelism" is reserved for pastors or "evangelists." Of course, there are special gifts in these areas in the church. But nowhere does the Bible limit the Great Commission to those with special gifts. All believers are under Jesus' "commission."

Paul said that we are "ambassadors" for Christ. An ambassador is a citizen of one country, assigned to a foreign country to tell about his homeland. Our first citizenship is in the Kingdom of God. But we are "commissioned" to share the gospel (good news) here on earth until we are called home.

Every time we hand someone a tract we can declare: "(co)mission accomplished." And often, it only takes 10 seconds or less. Paul prayed for boldness. For him, it raised a threat to his life. Will we not be judged for how we use the safety and freedom we enjoy to also be bold with the news of eternal life?

Missions Fund Report

People all over the world are much like us. They love their families, are pressured to provide for them in a world under a curse, and are seeking meaning in life. The same Chick tracts that grab attention for Jesus here in the U.S. do the same elsewhere. Your gifts to the Mission Fund last year made it possible to provide more than three million Chick tracts to over 75 missionaries and their teams.

Spotlight on Guyana

Missionary Noel Shrivnauth (BIMI) serves in Guyana, located right next to the tragedy of Venezuela. Since beginning in 1994, he has established a strong local church in Eccles, just outside Georgetown, and trained many national pastors who have established churches throughout the country. He got a recent phone call to the church from a young man asking for someone to talk to. Desperate over some addictive habits and sins he could not control, he needed help. When Noel asked “How did you hear about us?”, the young man described visiting his sister’s house where he spotted Charlie’s Ants on the table. He picked it up, got convicted, and called Noel. He came to church, then a church leader visited his home, and soon he got saved and baptized. He now is regular in church and serving the Lord. It all started with a cartoon tract!

Another church member drives a taxi, where he keeps Chick tracts you provided in the back seat pouch of his car. He tells customers to look through them and pick the one they like. One passenger (Amanda) chose No Fear. Riding with him another day, she admitted that she got this tract right at a time that she wanted to take her life. That tract convinced her not to commit suicide.

Through your giving, we send a shipment of life-giving tracts to Noel every quarter, to keep his mission supplied. Noel reports a huge increase in the number of people being saved. Thank you!

People everywhere stop what they are doing, and read Chick tracts. Now they know how to be saved!

Papua New Guinea

Missionary Eric Fair received the 20,000 Chick tracts you provided him. Here he describes what it is like to use them: “We have been passing the tracts out like crazy over here! Just went out today because we go out every Friday to street preach and pass out tracts in 2 places here. The first location we went through a whole box of the This Was Your Life tracts in Pidgin.... that’s 1,000 tracts in the first 30 minutes. By the time we hit the second location we had to use some of the tracts we had left but ran out very quick! Thank you all so very, very much for sending them to us!!! I had a guy come to me a couple weeks ago and ask for 2 boxes because he just got saved recently and gives hundreds of them out every day.”

God Comments... from p. 4

marry two ladies, or two men, or a lesbian and a bisexual, and a straight person, or a gay, and a transgender or whatever suits their fancy. God was not too happy with their meeting that afternoon and just a few minutes after two p.m., God sent a wake-up call to a very liberal ELCA meeting.

On a day when no severe weather was predicted or expected, which baffled the weather experts, a tornado touched down just south of downtown Minneapolis, Minnesota and followed 35W straight towards the city center. It crossed I94 and hit the convention center where they were having this meeting, punching a hole in the Minneapolis Convention Center roof.

Across the street from the Convention center was a very liberal Evangelical Lutheran Church that people were using for their worship services that week. The tornado split the church's steeple, causing the cross on top of the steeple to tip completely over, dangling in midair.

There were tents and tables set up outside the convention center to feed the people. The tornado stripped the tents, and turned the tables upside down. Kind of reminds me of the righteous anger Jesus had when He turned the tables upside down in the temple in Matthew 21.

I was sickened to say that the vote did pass 66.67 % (too close for comfort to the 666 mark of the beast) to allow what I would call the devilish spirit of homosexuality to be welcomed in every ELCA Church in America and opens the door to other churches and denominations to do the same.

The Christian Post commented: Had Jesus Christ Himself come down from heaven and unfurled His white, heavenly robe before the entire assembly to reveal all the secrets of the universe, and had He lovingly addressed the ELCA assembly, telling the pro-gay lobby that they were mistaken in their interpretations of the scripture, that homosexuality should not be un-sinned, but that His death on the cross covers the sin of homosexuality, and to repent and be saved, some learned theologians from an esteemed ELCA seminary would have interpreted Christ's visit in a manner consistent with the outcome they desired.

In fact, after the tornado hit, one GLBT (Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, Transgender) advocate rose to proclaim that the upside down cross on the cathedral steeple was a sign that the Holy Spirit was blowing through the assembly in big ways as they embarked to do a "new thing."

Bishop Michael Ingram is now confident that the Anglican Church of Canada will soon be blessing same-sex marriages and ordaining practicing homosexuals as ministers. He sees no problem in rewriting the Bible, the basis of the Anglican religion, so that its teachings will conform to the wishes of the activist homosexuals. The American Family Association had this to say: "As confusing as homosexual advocates try to make this issue, Bible-believing Christians had better get used to such verbal sleight-of-hand. And they had better prepare themselves to it, because the arguments of "gay" advocates are creeping into virtually every denomination."

Mission Fund Report... from p.10

Eric describes how they often don't care where they are —they just sit down and begin to read the gospel tracts, like the young man in the photo below:

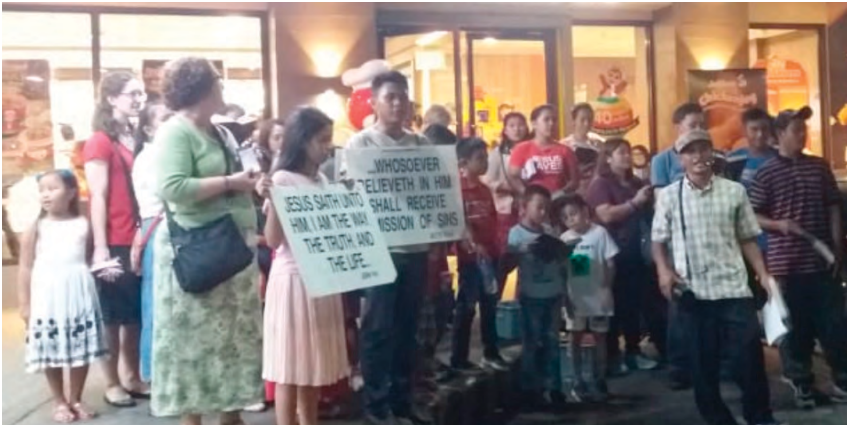

nighttime Christmas street meeting in one of the sections of our city. Our group passed nearly 2,500 tracts (all that we brought), held scripture signs and at least 8 preached to the countless multitudes shopping. We had zero resistance from the guards standing literally beside us. We stood right at the exit doors and passed tracts without interruption as fast as we could open the Chick tract cellophane wrappers. We had 92 in service the Sunday following with good attendance at the altar and many were dealt with concerning their souls.”

Since the last issue of Battle Cry, missionary shipments have been sent upon request to Kenya, Belgium, Tanzania, Philippines, Ethiopia, Japan, Mexico, Argentina and more. More and more missionaries are hearing about the Chick Mission Fund, and asking for tracts. Sometimes, we have to tell them that we don't have the funds, but will wait until the Lord sends more. They understand, but they gave up their homes and families to go. Will you give them the tools?

Philippines

Missionary Gerald Sutek describes his recent experience with the Chick tracts you provided: “On the last day of November (Friday night) we had 36 of our folk out for a hot, exciting,

Brothers and Sisters in Christ:

It is a great day to be alive! People are asking questions again.

Deborah and I have watched videos of giant crowds, declaring they don't want to be part of a "new world order." They are awakening, as if from a dream. Suddenly they are looking for answers.

Finally, people are questioning the world around them. That is a good thing. Because one good question leads to another.

Each of those precious souls has a void inside that only God can fill. No world leader, prosperity, security or worldly happiness can fill it. But Jesus can.

We at Chick are hearing stories of Christians around the world giving out thousands of tracts to people anxious to receive them. Some put them in their pockets for a quiet moment. Others stop right where they are to read them. These tracts are gospel seeds that grow and bear fruit. But like all seeds, they must be sown before they can bear fruit.

Every tract we give out is a seed to plant in at least one precious soul that needs to be saved.

It is good that they are asking questions. But we have one to ask them. It's the most important question of all: "Is your name in the book of life?"

All others pale in comparison. But unlike them, this one can be answered in moments by an open heart of childlike faith.

One day my daughter, Sarah, asked me an important question. "Daddy, am I going to heaven because I go to church?" And I said, "No, Honey. You can only go to heaven if you believe in Jesus." She asked, "Am I old enough?" And I said, "Yes." She grabbed the tract *This Was Your Life* and we went through it and prayed the prayer together on the last page. And right there in our van, in minutes, my daughter settled the most important question of all.

It's good when people are awake and asking questions. But God never told us to wait for that. He has told us to sow the seed wherever we can.

It's amazing what God will do with a willing heart, a few precious moments and a Chick tract.

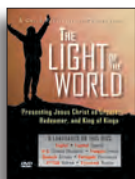

In Christ Jesus, and for His service,

David Daniels
