I saw that [REDACTED] already replied – she's so great (yet another reason why I shouldn't be online on my days off). Hopefully we'll be able to control how much time this takes up – [REDACTED]

after I wasted my summer on WiFi and other things, but we'll get it together. [REDACTED]

I do think we'll be an amazing team on the Hill. I do view this as an opportunity to make folks understand.

Do we know what theories the states are pursuing?

Just emailing you because I will get scolded if I reply to the DPIP folks because I'm supposed to be off – if we don't hear from [REDACTED] by Monday morning (which would be understandable, given that she's traveling back from Jerusalem this weekend), I am pretty comfortable talking about Canadian and European law off the top of my head. Do you know when the briefing will be? It shouldn't take me too long to get talking points together when I'm back on Monday (I assume that you don't need them by the 8:30 am meeting).

One thing we should discuss Monday is how the European/Canadian laws go further than ours. It would be good to point to language in their statutes and compare it to what we have in ours. Is this something OIA can help us with?
