Release Agitation.

MELBOURNE

The world still revolves on its axis, despite the fact that local light has been a trifle quiet in its propaganda activities. But meteorologists affirm that the sensitive scientific instruments that register the speed of the earth as it rushes with "cosmic fury" through space show a slight increase in speed. Melbourne activities are now going with all the old force and influence.

Yarra banks crowds, though rather on the small side when compared with the anti-conscription campaign, are getting bigger every Sunday, and bid fair to assume formidable proportions after a few weeks had passed. Last Sunday a decided acquisition to the I.W.W. was Mrs. Westbrook, of West Australia. She held the audience interested by telling a war with her story of the I.W.W. trials in the West. Other fellow-workers to speak were Alf Wilson and Charlie Dunn. In the hall in the evening the speaker was again Mrs. Westbrook, a fair number being present to hear her deal exhaustively with the West Australian trial. On Wednesday, in company with Fellow Worker Jeffrey, our female fellow-worker spoke at North Fitzroy at a meeting convened by that stirring little woman, Mrs. Holmes, of Garrison station, the meetings were fairly successful, and the case for the boys in Sydney goal was well received by the female section of the crowd. Friday night meetings in the suburbs, are all held under the auspices of the Workers' Defence Committee, and all available I.W.W. propagandists take part. These street meetings are doing a great deal to arouse sympathy and sentiment for the incarcerated, being attended nearly always by good crowds to greet the various speakers.

Contrary to general expectations, the Trades Council decided against affiliating with the Workers' Defence League, preferring to carry on as an agitation of their own for the release the boys in Long Bay Goal. It is gratifying to note that they have moved in the matter, as they must now see clearly that the Trades Union Movement will also come in for its share of persecution, if action of some sort is not taken at once.

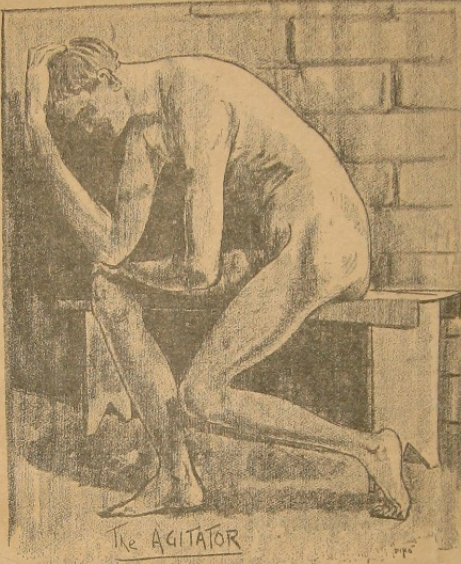

It is also noted that the Political Labour Council is going to move on the same direction, although nothing definite is known. The excitement generated by the conscription issue was only transient and the slaves got back into the same groove again immediately after it was over. Only now are they beginning to see that the I.W.W. case affects them greatly, and as deeply as ever. "William the Lawd" has been very silent of late over the I.W.W., possibly it may be that his favorite sport of fulminating against and misrepresenting the Industrial Workers of the World has been played out, and no longer having the efficiency it once had. He that is as my, the seven and a half zone long of honour, wind and confidence is now silent, as far as the "Wobblies" are concerned.

NORMAN JEFFERY.

LITHGOW.

Last week, two speakers on behalf of the Defence and Release Committee, F.W.W. Wilson and C. Sinclair, proceeded to Lithgow to conduct a series of meetings. Upon arrival they were met by some of the local fellow-workers, who had the meetings well advertised.

There being no free speech on the streets of Lithgow for I.W.W. speakers, and the local municipal council having a rumour upon the matter, the Mayor not being so sufficiently upon the by-laws, and the authorities not being over-anxious to interpret the law in our favor, considerable difficulty was experienced in getting a stand from where to hold the meetings. The main crowd and most suitable spot for meetings provides an ideal stand for the purpose. The Railway Department has control of the only vacant corner. The Trades Hall rents a portion for advertising purposes in connection with a picture show, which that institution confounds. On Sunday night, next the end of the meeting, F.W.W. Wilson had his name taken for trespassing on Government property, despite the fact that permission was granted from the Trades Hall to the I.W.W. to conduct their meetings there. All classes of jingles and I.W.W. critics are never interfered with when they choose to hold their meetings from that spot. Result regarding the booking is awaited with anxiety.

On Friday night a large crowd assembled, and a successful meeting was held. A show near closing time finished the meeting. It rained heavily on Saturday night. On Sunday night an exceptional meeting was held. Several questions were answered, and plenty of information supplied. The collections were good, and the sales of literature up to the mark.

F.W.W. Swift was chairman at all meetings. Prospects are very bright. The workers are clamouring for information regarding the I.W.W. cases, and the movement in general. The houses are prepared to fight on every inch of the way, true to their traditions. The "Lithgow Mercury," which has a very wide circulation, has been devoting a good deal of its columns to the I.W.W. The local fellow-workers have answered most of the criticism, and the various speakers have cleared the remainder on to date.

It is hoped that in the near future that a local will be formed, and Lithgow will very shortly be a strong industrial fort for the One Big Union.

"DAMNING EVIDENCE."

The Melbourne "Argus," of 13th December, begins its subleader with the following sentence: "Further damning evidence of the sinister intentions of the I.W.W. is contained in the disclosure of the damage done to the cruiser Brisbane at Sydney."

"The damning evidence" is given in the next column, under the heading, "I.W.W. Influxion." It is worth reading as a typical example of "evidence" as the term is understood by the capitalist press.

"Replying to a question in the House of Representatives yesterday, the Minister for the Navy stated that he received a report from the general manager of Cockatoo Island dockyards that some person or persons had deliberately cut the whole of the electric wires that led from the bridge of the cruiser Brisbane. The general manager had further reported that the action of some of the men at the dockyards had caused him a great deal of concern. The man had never been discovered, but he had instructed the manager of the dockyards that if he knew of any I.W.W. men working on the cruiser Brisbane he was to denounce them immediately."

"Damning evidence," indeed, but who is damned by it? The I.W.W. of the "The Argus" — Following."

I do not like to write as I do— I prefer to vote the I.W.W. The glorifier of man, the call of beauty, 'I'd rather dream sweet dreams, And have fun in purchased adventures; Or like to write of the captives of Spain, But whenever I see' my life is mine. I bear the rebel's well in jail."

Defence Agitation.

QUEENSLAND.

WEEKLY REPORT.

On Wednesday last I addressed the A.M.E. I.U. Conference. A recommendation from the Brisbane branch urged the Executive to vote £20. However, they ultimately voted £10, which has not yet come to hand. In the same evening I addressed the Russian Association. They collected £1 at the meeting, and promised to open a list in "Bastards Zinoviev's" (their paper) for the defence. On Friday I spoke at an I.W.W. meeting in the Square. On Saturday I left for Gympie, for the week-end. I spoke there outdoor on Saturday evening. Large crowd, but rather backward. Didn't get enough collection to cover expenses, but a future visit will have much better results.

Last night I went to speak to Railway Union, but they had packed the meeting against me. A resolution was to be put, voting £20, but haven't heard the results. I spoke at the Letter Carriers' afterwards, and they were very sympathetic. Expect money from them. Lists are going out on the railway and the Gympie Post Office workers. Money is coming in, and we expect to be able to send £20 as soon as Bullock's £10 arrives.

"Speeches" and dodgers have not arrived. Did you send any by Jack Birkel Sabataged in mail, I suppose. Could have sold 200 at Gympie easily.

Speaking at Redbank on Wednesday, we are not quite sure of Premier's sanction to Art Union. Can't run it for defence. Must be for women and children. Same thing. He seems a little afraid.

We will be assured of a few hundred if Ryan comes through. No meetings at Brisbane. Wet week-end. Not much good so going north as expenses are heavy and income small. Was thinking of trying Glenorchy or Cofts Harbair.

Good luck. Glad to hear of success at Lithgow. All makes good.

Yours fraternally,

TOM BARBER.

BARRIER.

Broken Hill is still boiling with discontent. At De Havas last week a slave met with an accident. The storekeeper, whose duty it was to procure medical aid, refused to ring up the doctor, and the men took "direct action," and walked out and remained out till the storekeeper was freed. The brasserie and plutocrat at the North Broken Hill Mine sent a driver with the boss over the bonus system and again we had the pleasure of seeing a fine display of solidarity. All hands walked out, and the mine stood idle for two days. The men said they would have out wages at the ruling rates, with an extra man on the brace and pit. The meeting, seeing that the miners had decided to resist what they regarded as an injury to one of the concerns of all, granted all demands. The men resumed work on Friday afternoon. Local Nos. 1 and 3 decided yesterday to circulate all other unions on the Barrier, whose members are working night shift, with a view to abolishing the night shift. The Rev. S. H. Yarrington, in the course of his lectures here, was speaking on the Rev. Maguire's condemnation of the clergy and politicians for not doing their duty in the interest of humanity.

Preparations is still going on steadily in good form. The local meeting. Now I and my are getting all the publicity possible from the politicians in particular. The release committee has organized a monster procession, next Sunday, with the A. B. Ring in attendance, which will march through the main streets, and finish up in the central square, where a demonstration will be held. Many of the old fellows, the local ones, now I and my are arriving back to the Hill to take part in the grand light of the working class against the onslaughts of the human villainous of money.

DIRECT ACTION.

small or how large, can continue producing independently of all other groups. Under the present system of SOCIAL PRODUCTION, all trades co-operate together in producing and supplying the world with all its needs.

The day is now gone when anyone can say: "Alone I did it." The day is now mainly years flow. When one trade can isolate itself from others.

The bakers and cooks would be UNABLE to feed the world if tailors, carpenters, bricklayers, miners, transport workers, agricultural labourers, etc., etc., did not help them to carry on.

The builder would be USELESS to society if he did not get the assistance of the miner, farmer, labourer, tailor, etc., etc. It is exactly the same with every other branch of work. They are all IN-EXTRICABLY linked together.

One body of workers is DIRECTLY AND PERMANENTLY dependent upon all other bodies in order to get their living.

It should be apparent to all that the interests of all workers in the world are PERFECTLY IDENTICAL with each other IRRESPECTIVE OF WHAT THEIR JOB OCCUPATION they may follow.

The question of sex, creed, colour, or nationality SHOULD NOT ENTER INTO DISPUTE in this stern, grim, fierce struggle with the master class.

In order to win over the deprivations of the master class and prevent the oppressive measures of international capitalism, the working class is FORCED THROUGH ACTUAL NECESSITY to organise as one class into One Big Union.

By the working class grouping themselves together into One Big Union, irrespective of sex, creed, colour or nationality, they are laying the foundations of the New Society, when the workers will revel in the glory of their own production. ORGANISE, and help to speed the day when the world will be bathed in the sunshine of peace, happiness and plenty.

ORGANISE, and help along the day when parasites, criminals, and beggars will be no more.

N.R.

Overwork.

American people are overworked, and are approaching a breakdown, declares Miss Josephine Godmark, the National Consumers' League, who reports the first claim of organized labor that shorter working days are necessary to preserve health and vitality.

"Overwork is the greatest single menace to public health in America," she said. "People are dying younger in America than ever before. Workers are wearing out carrying them. The disease which is carrying them is the deadly influenza epidemic of overwork. The death rate from complex and nervous diseases has increased 19 per cent in 10 years, according to the census report of 5,989,000 working people; from heart disease the increase has been 29 per cent; from disease of the kidneys and urinary system, 42 per cent, and from disease of the liver and digestive organs 44 percent. It does not take a physician to know that these diseases are typically the diseases of fatigue.

"Fatigue is poison. It is the poisoning of the system by worn-out cells which would normally be carried off by it. If activity is not balanced by rest, life itself is threatened."

Speech by Mr. Frank M. Anderson, M.P., at Bramwell Town Hall, Melbourne. "Dealing with the I.W.W. trial, Mr. Ansell said that a portion of the defence was allowed to be published. The whole of this evidence should be given to the public, and they were endeavouring to get it. (Applause) He had read all the depositions against the accused men, and a gigantic paper conspiracy. Instead of being an instrument against the labour movement, it was going to condemn the ministry and cause the whole of the (Applause). The prosecution was not thought of till there was a political end to serve.

Applications are called for All copies of "DIRECT ACTION" of the I.W.W. for at least six months, and may be applied to at the office before March 1st, 1917.

LAW AND JUSTICE.

Law and justice are wonderful things. So many things laudatory have been said about justice that people are usually led to believe that it is something tangible, something easily identified and always worth striving to obtain.

The law of the land is the embodiment of the idea of justice prevalent on the particular spot, and among the particular class of people who enact the laws. The law determines that certain actions are not permissible, and that other actions must be performed by the people whom it is desired to place under the operation of the law. If they do not comply with the law the legal machinery is set in motion, and the hapless non-conformists are slapped into the jaws of stern "justice."

But as a matter of fact, practically anything within the compass of human understanding has been lawful and unlawful in turn. To burn, murder, rob, and steal is lawful and unlawful at the same time, according to who commits the murder, theft, etc. As a rule anything vile is lawful whenever it is done on a sufficiently large scale and with the full blessing of capitalist church and state. At one time it was unlawful to harbour or protect men of certain religious beliefs. Now it is unlawful to persecute men of the same religious belief. The inhabitants of certain territories, such as Alsace, Lorraine or Egypt, etc., have found themselves running the risk of jails and galleys, first fanatical, afterwards because they didn't. So that it is lawful or not does not depend on whether it is wicked or not but simply on whether it suits the purpose of those in whose interests the law is framed.

Again, in the name of justice, we have seen men driven from their homes, innocent women and children starved to death or being sent to the bottom of the sea. To expend the wealth of the world in trying to deprive millions of workers of the opportunity to earn a living is just. To deprive millions of workers of the opportunity to earn a living is just. To drive hungry paupers to transgress the laws of property, and afterwards to beat them senseless with batons, or to shoot them down in cold blood, or to immerse them in poisonous dungeons until they are suffering death, is just. Many good acts of charity have also been performed in the name of justice. In short, any old

Emerson has said: "Good men must not obey the laws too long." There is a deep significance in that. Emerson was a philosopher, who had peeped deeply in to the profound secrets of the human heart and the forces which shape the actions of men and society. He would not lightly utter misleading words or expressions to frivolous sentiments. When he said that good men must not obey the laws too long, he meant that at times it becomes the sacred duty of the individual to break the laws imposed by the self-seeking forces of authority. He knew that governments are more prone to impose laws that are detrimental to the human race than to help in the progress of humanity.

Governments can commit crimes without impunity from which the individual would shrink with horror because a government has neither got a body to be kicked, or a soul to be damned. An individual on the other hand, knows that humanity will judge his actions. If he makes slips it is not because he is willfully wicked, but because he is liable to make mistakes. The only exception to this rule is the man who is prepared to commit violence in order to obtain the goods others have created.

Whenever one class is oppressed and unhappy it is because the class which possesses the wealth of the world is depriving them of the wealth they create or tyrannise over them. Naturally, to try to uphold the yoke of capitalism and its beneficence is as justifiable and laudatory in the minds of the working class as an undesirable and therefore unlawful object in the minds of the capitalists. As a rule, to try to rid the working class of the yoke of the capitalists is unlawful because as a rule laws are class laws, enacted to keep the capitalist tyrants rich and powerful and the oppressed workers poor and under the heel of the capitalist authority.

Therefore, it becomes the mission of the working class to fight, not for "law and justice" but for the uplift and well-being of humanity. It becomes the duty of the working class not to initiate the brutality, the murder, and the exploitation of the capitalists and their governments, but to counteract the crimes of capitalism and to protect the working class against its enemies, whether it be legal or not. Only when the working class unites to see that everything is for the well-being of the world's workers can they hope to open the gates of the jails and to liberate the heroes and martyrs, who are languishing in the dungeons of capitalism, which dared to fight for humanity.

FAT'S FATHERLY ADVICE. LABOUR AND CAPITAL SHOULD WORK HAND IN HAND.

If you unemployed and starving, bear it like a man; And stop for ever gawking at our grub-grabbing plan; Though we may hurt a little with our pet-rickshaw device, We will smooth your piny troubles in a jiff of good advice.

Don't get nasty when you hungry, be reasonable and kind; When you create our luxuries you really should not mind; If your used to unemployment and no stranger to despair; When in the depth of poverty be like me and banish care.

Never raise a horrid clamour when you voice a stern demand; For I, your dearest brother, will lend a helping hand; I will aid you with sweet promises and tender platitudes.

And what that succulent? Must you always cry for food? That you should be dissatisfied fills me with surprise; And to have the damned impertinence to go and regale; And upon my kind benevolence seriously re-act; It's absurd! I live in a prison, why charge me with regret.

Let us pull together, let the strong protect the weak; And of fretting differences and hunger never speak; You may live in vile conditions, and starve on your own; I will love you like a brother, if you only will love.

Let us pull together, let the strong protect the weak; And of fretting differences and hunger never speak; You may live in vile conditions, and starve on your own; I will love you like a brother, if you only will love.

PETE.

LET IT BE SETTLED RIGHT

However the battle is ended, Though proudly the victor comes, With fluttering flag and prancing mane, And jingling rolling drums, Still truth remains the motto In letters of living light. No question is ever settled Until it is settled right.

Though the heel of the strong oppresses, May grind the weak in the dust, And the voices of fame, with one acclaim, May call him great and just, Let those who speak with warning, And keep the motto in sight— No question is ever settled Until it is settled right.

Let those who have failed to take courage, Though the enemy seems to have won, Tho' his ranks are strong if he be in the wrong, The motto is not yet done. For sure as the morning sun rises, The darkest hour of night, No question is ever settled Until it is settled right.

O man, bowed down with labor! O man, young, yet old, O heart, quaking at the toiler's breast, And crushed by the power of gold! Keep on with your weary battle, Against triumphant might, For sure as the morning follows, The darkest hour of night, No question is ever settled Until it is settled right.

"O'er to be French and stay in the trenches for twenty months; get wounded; get buried in the ground by a shell; stand all day and freeze; eat your meals with your hands; be cutting bodies of your dead friends setting that one bare; breathe poison gas—after war."

Others' Views.

THE I.W.W. CASES.

The writer is not a member of the I.W.W., he is not personally acquainted with anyone who has been in a criminal trial, and he is concerned in the late St. Paul trial, and he may be claimed that what he has to say is the candid opinion of a law-loving and impartial citizen of the Commonwealth.

In these days, when to merely mention the I.W.W. is to be accused of sympathy with criminality, it is necessary that THE VOICE OF TRUTH AND HUMANITY SHOULD BE HEARD ABOVE THE TUMULT OF IGNORANCE AND MALVOLENCE. We live in a society where every man and woman is entitled to justice and a fair trial. And freedom of speech and action, within the law, is our sacred heritage.

Much of the evidence on which the I.W.W. members were convicted, was based upon statements of opinion alleged to have been made at public meetings in the Sydney Domain and elsewhere. Now, if those speeches were offences against the law, why were they allowed to go on for weeks without police interference? And if they were not offences against the law, why were they admitted as evidence to prove complicity in crime?

According to the latest New South Wales law, it is not a crime to give evidence, if every person who advocates a drastic change in the distribution of wealth (or speculates on how to bring it about), is a criminal, because he desires to deprive some people of their money and to give it to others, or that others may get a fairer share of it. There was no imperfectly reported speeches of any of the evidence in the recent trial that any of the accused had actually incited anyone to acts of violence.

As a matter of plain fact there was NO POSITIVE EVIDENCE OF A SINGLE UNLAWFUL ACT ON THE PART OF ANY OF THE ACCUSED, and all of them (except one, who had a certain questionable conviction against him), had impeccable characters, free from the slightest taint of crime. The police knew none of them in any connection other than as reputable members of the world-wide movement known as "The Industrial Workers of the World." The leaders were well-known industrial propagandists (always opposed to the official Labor Party) who worked openly and spoke freely in the presence of the police for years.

We are now asked to suddenly believe that these citizens, whose reputations were without blemish, are a gang of dangerous criminals who are being lightly dealt with in being sent to a life term for their speech. AND THE ONLY EVIDENCE ON WHICH THEY WERE CONVICTED WAS CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE SUPPLIED BY ALLEGED ACCUSERS, AVOIDED INFORMERS, AND INTERESTED MEMBERS OF THE POLICE FORCE, WHOSE NAMES I SHOULD BE PLEASED TO ADVISE YOU WERE SPECIALLY EMPLOYED.

And the Government's determination to secure that drastic conviction was further shown by the bringing of one of the most eminent and able men in the Australian Empire, who handled the case with bitterness and maintenance all the way through, from the Police Court to the place presided over by Justice Price. Clearly, the Crown did not think the evidence in itself, was sufficient to convict, and employed the most persuasive counsel to put the most plausible case possible to the jury.

But it is not conceivable that the matter should be allowed to rest where the judge left it.

Tactics.

A prominent feature in the struggle for existence is the combination of the weak in order to resist the depredations of the strong. The efficiency of a union depends at least, in large measure, upon the aggressiveness, as the intellectuals would say, in the confused huddles of the least valiant; the parallel in humanly being? Had rash of a panic-stricken mob, a case where united efforts led to destruction. Will dogs afford an example of united action, showing a high efficiency, chiefly because aggressiveness is used with intelligence in the attack of the weak? The well-known example afforded by bees and wasps, in their prompt resortment of intrusion, illustrate the fact that united action must combine offensive tactics with defensive efforts to secure results worth mentioning. All observation tends to show the absurdity of passive resistance, or even non-resistance at a time possible.

Upon reflection, it is shown the necessity of an active and continuous offensive not only to secure further gains, but even to hold what we have; which is at present but little, owing owing to our lack of aggressiveness.

J. Z. JONES.

"Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not class-consciousness, I am as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal." (With apologies to Saint Paul).

A class-conscious means to know, to understand, and as Herbert Spencer pointed out, it also means to predict, to forecast.

The preamble of the I.W.W. is a class-conscious piece of literature that is not famous and will in time become historic. When the historians come to write the account of the twentieth century social revolution, and to leave out the I.W.W., I tremble, would be like to write an account of the peasants' revolt and leave out such names as John Ball and Wat Tyler, or to write of the French revolution and not mention such names as Danton and Marat.

"It is the historic mission of the working class to overthrow capitalism." That's it. Intelligent industrial unionists no longer look upon the class struggle as a long drawn out and weary ordeal, which go to make up the life of a wage earner, and the capitalists to live in riotous plenty and vicious luxury; but we look upon the class struggle as a means of giving the workers the necessary experience, and consequently the knowledge to be able to take over the industries of the world, and to run them in the interests of the workers of the world.

Without the understanding of the great law of evolution, there would be no class-consciousness working class movement. In the past, the workers just revolted in blind fury against their task masters; and when they did revolt, with a determination and a purpose in view, to seize the industries.

THE STATE.

THE NEW IDOL.

Somewhere there are still peoples and herds, but not with us, my brethren: here there are states.

A state? What is that? Well! upon your cars you lie, for now will I say unto you my word concerning the death of peoples.

A state is called the coldest of all cold matters. Coldly lies it also; and this creepeth from its mouth: "I, the state, am the people."

It is a lie! Creators were they who created them; and hung a faith and a love over them: thus they served life.

Destroyers are they who lay snares for men, and call it the state. They lay a word and a hundred cravings over them.

Where there is still a people, there the state is not understood, but hated as the evil eye, and as an evil slave and customs.

This sign I give unto you: every people speaketh the language of good and evil; this is the neighbor-relationship; not the state. Its language hath it devised for itself in laws and customs.

But the state lieth in all languages of good and evil; and whosoever it hath it lieth; and whosoever it hath it shall die.

False is everything in it, with its throne itself, the biting one. False are even its bits.

Confusion of language, of good and evil; this I give unto you and the retreating finger of God.—Verily, the will to death, indestructible this sign! Verily, it becometh unto the prisoners of death!

Many, too many, are born: for the superfluous ones, with the state devised.

See just how it stretch them to it, the many-to-many! How fit sweatwater and deweth and re-closeth them!

"On earth, there is nothing greater than I. Yet, I give unto you and the retreating finger of God.—Thus search the mother: And not only the long-saved and short-lived fall upon their knees!

And! I give unto your ears, ye great souls, it whispereth its gloomy lies! Ah! if I findeth out the rich hearts which unwillingly lavish themselves!

Yes, I findeth you out too, ye conquerors of the old God! Weary ye become of the conflict, and now your weariness serveth the new idol!

Everything will it give you, if ye worship it, the new idol; thus it purchaseth the lustre

It is the mission of the I.W.W. to foster this spirit of class-consciousness amongst the workers of Australia. Industrial unionists will use any or every means to this end. They will use the magic of spoken word and the power of the potent pen, to give at all times a scientific and philosophical interpretation of the class struggle.

The labor movement is the spirit of the age. The labor movement can never be understood apart from the class struggle. Any section of the labor movement that adheres strictly to the class struggle, will always be the most vital and dynamic force in the working class. The I.W.W. is that already in Australia, and because of its class-consciousness, its class knowledge, and as Bacon pointed out, "Knowledge is power," the I.W.W. is able to influence the workers out of all proportion to its numbers. Our members know this, and they are afraid. Class-consciousness develops self-reliance, and self-reliance is one of the highest indications of character. The I.W.W., with its industrial unionist program, will always endeavor to develop the self-reliance of its workers, hence we are quite right in scorning the old methods of arbitration and political action; we belong to the new order, direct action and industrial democracy. All through the universe, new forms never make terms with the old; the new grows up "inside the shell of the old."

We industrial workers are the makers and shakers of the earth. This world can be made to be filled with gladness and peace, and all other things that the arts will flourish; nobody can do this, nobody will do this, but a class-conscious working class.

This is the historic mission of my class! Your class!

The working class!

MICK SAWTELL.

of your virtue, and the glance of your proud eyes?

I seeketh to allure by means of you," the many-to-many! Yes, a health-ardent hath been devised, with health-ardent jingling with the trappings of divine honors!

Yes, a dying for many hath been devised, which glorifieth itself as life: verily, a heavy service unto all preservers of death!

The state, it is, where all are poisonous drinkers, the good and the bad; the state where the slow suicide of all—is called "life."

Just see these superfluous ones! They steal the works of the inventors and the treasures of the new culture; they call their inventions and everything beneath sickness and trouble unto them!

Just see these superfluous ones! Sick are they; they vomit their bile and call it a newspaper. They devour one another, and cannot even digest themselves.

Just see these superfluous ones! Wealth they acquire and become poorer thereby. Power they seek for, and above the lever of gold and silver money—their impotent cure!

See them clamor, these nimble apes; thus scuttles into the mud and the abyss.

Towards the throne they all strive: it is their mind, culture, as it happens and on the throne. Oft-times sitteth fifth on the throne—and oft-times also the throne on fifth.

Madden they all seem to be, and clamorous apes, and too eager. Badly scuttles their vain culture; they devour one another, badly they all smell to me, these idolaters.

My brethren, will ye suffocate in the fumes of their maw and appetites! Better break the windows and jump into the open air!

Do go out of the way of the bad! Withdraw from the holiness of the superfluous!

Do go out of the way of the bad! Withdraw from the steam of these human sacrifices!

Open still remaineth the earth for great souls. Open the eyes who are not asleep for lone ones and twain ones, around which doateth the evil of tranquil seas.

Open still remaineth a free life for great souls. Open the eyes who possesseth little, so much the less possessed;—these not create poverty!

There, where the state ceaseth—there only consumeth the man who is not superfluous;—knoweth the song of the necessary one, the single and irreplaceable melody.

There, where the state ceaseth—proceed, thither, ye who are not set out in the rainbow and the bridges of the Aspernauts?— Thus spare Aspernauts. NETSCHE

Officials Going Slow at Cordeaux Dam.

A few lines in "Direct Action" would not be out of place (perhaps) in warning fellow-workers in search of a boss to keep right away from Cordeaux Dam.

Let me say straight away that there is no need to have any power, and the excess of supply over demand has lowered the conditions existing on the job to a degree which is simply revolting as regards sanitary arrangements; humiliating through the tyranny of bosses, and unbecomingly to the greatest extent as regards food and water provision.

Common decency prevent me from being able to describe accurately the contrivance which has been erected to meet the requirements of sanitary accommodation, suffice it to say that to receive an object lesson in being slow to strip even while the victim is as yet far away from the sacred spot, is absolutely unnecessary. Water can be obtained by walking the better part of a quarter of a mile, the tank which is supposed to supply the camp, holding barely sufficient for the requirements of about a dozen men.

The storekeeper has a monopoly of his profession, and plays the monopolist's game for all it is worth. "Nuff said."

The only bootleer house available for those who are lucky (or unlucky) enough to obtain work is situated about a mile and a half from the camping ground.

Finally, if any new members of the I.W.W. wish to receive an object lesson in being slow they only need pay a visit to Cordeaux Dam, and see for themselves the methods adopted by an autocratic engineer and a servile horde of understrappers of providing for the workers ordinary common decent living conditions.

The "Telegraph" and "Herald" have recently had reports of certain notices posted up along the road from here to Douglas Park. I have not been credibly informed that the Resident Engineer was not a member of the I.W.W. I should certainly have said that he was the culprit.

I might add for the information of those who, in spite of this warning, persist in coming here, that until they have actually obtained work they are not permitted to camp anywhere on catchment area.

Yours,

F. M. BOLLETT.

British Workers Moving.

We are informed that a conference called "a rank and file conference" which had been arranged by the "Engineering, Electrical and Shipbuilding Amalgamation Committee" took place last week at Leeds, when the following resolution was put and carried:

"That realizing, as at present organized, the trade union movement, entirely inadequate, this conference of the rank and file, demands that the executives of all unions (catering for engineering and shipbuilding workers), immediately get together, and form a practical scheme of amalgamation; that said fuse all sectional unions into one industrial union, having as its object the organization of all workers in the industry regardless of craft or sex, and, as its ultimate aim, the control of industry for the complete abolition of the wages system."

An amendment, to delete the word, "regardless of craft or sex," was defeated by a large majority.

The conference expressed the opinion that action should be taken on the initiative of the amalgamated society of engineers within the month.

The conference was the outcome of one held in London last August, at which a resolution was passed, calling upon the executives of the unions of engineering and shipbuilding workers to fuse all sectional organizations into one industrial union, comprising every worker in the industry, regardless of craft or sex, and, as its ultimate aim, the complete control of the industry.

HIGH PRICES AND MONOPOLY PRICES.
We have been considering Low Prices and their effect upon the working class. We have covered that owing to the competition among wage-workers, for jobs, wages are reduced (when prices fall) to just about the cost of living. In discussing Low Prices we have learned what would happen as a result. We are still speaking of commodities which exchange at their values.

If the value of the necessities of life is doubted, the value of your labor-power will be doubted, also. Suppose the value of food, clothing and shelter be twice what it was formerly and wages remain stationary.

Reformers will tell you that the grocer, the butcher, clothier and landlord are exploiting you.

They say that your employer exploits you, but that when you go to spend your wages, these other men also cheat or rob you.

But if wages do not rise to the same level as the necessities of life, this merely means that your boss is no longer paying you the value of your labor-power. The value of food, clothing and shelter determine the value of your labor-power.

Shortage of workmen may cause labor-power to exchange above the value of food, clothing and shelter. This value temporarily, but that when you go to spend your wages, these other men also cheat or rob you.

But when you go to spend your wages, these other men also cheat or rob you. But when he goes to buy shoes, food, meat or clothes, he finds the owner of these commodities selling them at a higher price than he can pay.

But when he goes to buy shoes, food, meat or clothes, he finds the owner of these commodities selling them at a higher price than he can pay. The reformers conclude that these merchants are exploiting the workers also. These people do not understand that the value of the necessities of life determine wages.

No one individual workman or woman receive the value of their labor-power. Some men and women receive a little more than the value of their labor-power. I know a young girl in this city who works in a department for 5 dolls a week. She cannot buy food, clothing and shelter for 5 dolls. Her brother receives 15 dolls a week. He can live no less than that.

Men cannot work long upon less wages than the value of their labor-power. They must have help from without. Fortunate members of families help those who do not earn enough to live on. Thousands of families receive information all from charity organizations, so that the workers in general receive just about the value of its labor-power. In other words, the army of workers receive enough to produce more workers for tomorrow and twenty years from now. It is the unemployed fighting for jobs who force wages down almost to the bare cost of living.

We see how an increase in the value of necessities of life means a corresponding increase in the value of labor-power. We must, therefore, berate the grocer, the butcher, the landlord when our employers fail to pay us the value of our labor-power. We will be forced to demand higher wages in order to live.

High Prices do not necessarily mean that food, clothing, etc. are increased in value. It may mean that gold—its value as a medium of exchange—has decreased in value. The demand of almost all commodities is to decrease in value as modern production lessens the necessary labor contained in them. Gold may decrease in value faster than the value of meat, shoes, bread and clothing has decreased.

Value of labor-power is shrinking, but wages are shrinking faster in value. Since gold remains in over-depreciating the necessities of life, its value is increased. The amount of one dollar buys less meat to-day than it bought ten years ago.

Reformers are crying for Low Prices, but are demanding more necessities. When the value of their labor-power is in all the gold standard nations to-day. They are to-morrow. Everywhere we see wages-slavery rising to meet the increased cost of living.

We have berated the High Prices, while we have only complained because they have risen five years ago. Gold (or wages) will be depressed in value somewhat, and as commodities tend to exchange at their values, gold buys less.

We may still be receiving the same number of dollars each week, but the value of these dollars has decreased. Actually our wages have been reduced. Unless they enable us to buy the necessities of life we are not receiving the value of our labor-power from our employer.

1. An increase in the price of the necessities of life may come from an increase in the value of commodities. We shall have to receive an equal rise in wages. If we are to get the value of our labor-power.

2. Wages (or gold) may decrease in value until they no longer will purchase value of labor-power. Unless we receive more wages accordingly, we will be receiving less than the value of our labor-power.

Shearing News.

The following sheds in N.S.W. are shearing at 300/-
290-1, Brooklyn, Balrang, Strathgobie, Hill Midkin, Wullahong, Curraghanna.
Also, a Cunningham, chairman of Shearers' Disputes, in view of several small sheds in this district have started since the compulsory conference, and are all paying the 30s rate, so we do not anticipate any trouble this year, in this quarter, but are keeping the men in line. In case of trouble cropping up, a wire from Blackall, Queensland, signed Herb. Smith, reads: "All shearing trouble settled; 30s and 40 hours."

Thomas J. Loudale, Gen. Sec. The I.W.W. Union of Charlsville, writes a long letter on Queensland, printed circular of resolutions for the shearers cooks in Queensland, and says: "I've got great hopes that thro' the cooks' demands I will yet be able to get the men (who have gone in for 25s) to go for the higher rate." He also says: "I regret to say that some Queensland men have for the present taken on the conference rates, and are, therefore, in my opinion, scabbing on the men to the South, etc."

Mr. Loudale also admits that he will come to N.S.W. in the back blocks, and lend a hand for a week or two, and will possibly be "Shore's" February.

Fred Richmond (Morve) writes: "It is up to the Sydney 'mob' to be up and doing, and use more action than pass resolutions."

Now, you sheep rebels, take his advice and have a follow action, and we will—divided we will lose.

H. C. Prince (Cobar) writes:—"Jack Anderton advises me that there was a meeting of shearers, in Barroba, and that they are pulling a stick up February."
Will all sheds working for the rates, and have started (since compulsory conference) please write to the address below, advising me. I want a list of all 30s sheds at once.

Also, will all sheds working for the rates, the Putes Committees or Secretaries who are not in communication with me, write at once and send me news.

COOKS.

Dear Sir or Madam:—We are writing you to-day for the purpose of placing before you several resolutions that were passed at a meeting of cooks here, and which we believe if put into operation would materially benefit the cooks. In our occupation of cooking, in the past cooks have been receiving uniform rates of pay or conditions and to obviate this we believe cooks should have an Executive Committee of Management composed of cooks in the proportion of two to each district to meet in a central place at least once a year to conserve the interests of cooks. If you are favorable to the resolutions attached, and the list of Central Executive, will you be good enough to write to the Secretary at Charlsville, and give your views in support of the scheme or otherwise. The cooks will require to "walk up" if they are to share in any of the benefits that are accruing to the workers.

- 1. Rates: 75 6d per week per man for 48hrs. 6s per cook for plants. Minimum rates, 4s per week.
- 2. All cooks refuse to work where other than the figure (4) two hour runs are worked.
- 3. Where ruling rates and conditions for cooks are not granted at any shed all cooks such as to refuse to work.
- 4. All meat required by shearers or other uses shall not be slaughtered by cooks or assistants.
- 5. Where water is not used on a vessel for sheep shall be placed where cook desires, and kept filled by station.
- 6. That the use of shears and shed lands be authorized to insure cooks' cheques

Spasms.

(By Tom Barker).

Several naution workers in an English works were recently sentenced to two months imprisonment for smoking on the works. It is reported that King George, on a visit to the factory was so careful that he took his spurs off. It is unlikely and improbable that he also took his coat off.

Several suffragettes are alleged to have attempted to poison Mr. Lloyd George and Mr. Asyth Handabson. We can only say that if the stomachs of these gentlemen are as tough as their necks, it would be a waste of energy to attempt poisoning them.

The Lockhart wheat-stacks have broken into fire for the third time. We anticipate the Justice (he pardon—the Law) Department rounding up another dozen I.W.W. men. In other countries there are certain chemical laws that cause spontaneous combustion under certain conditions. But not in New South Wales. They are not allowed to. What is the I.W.W. for, anyway?

We present Mr. W. A. Holman, Premier, with the Distinguished Order of the Nose-bag for questioning Archbishop Mannix's indisputable statement about the war being merely a trade war. The right honorable and distinguished gentleman ought to read the balance sheets of various industrial concerns, but possibly his time is taken up pretty well in framing more legislation on the lines of the Crimes Amendment Act. A little less salary and a little more self-reliance would certainly almost place our politicians on the same level as thinking beings.

The Miles Branch of the Queensland Railway Union has a petition for the agenda paper for the annual conference, which asks the Government to institute savings banks at each station, so that the remains of their weekly salaries may not burn a hole in the pockets of their copper-riveted rags. There will be a big rise coming when Arbitration Court judges read this paper. "Why," he will say, "a rise in wages? Why, they can't spend all they've got now!" The Miles branch of the Q.R.U. are on the Distinguished Order of the Nosebag.

Their Infallibilities, the Honorable Ministers for Defence and the Navy have been interesting themselves in the past over things that didn't concern them. Possibly, in future they may find time to interest themselves in equipping up some of the saggy finances that have been lately investigated in the courts. And they might as well persuade the Man of Mystery to get to the bottom of the Section Dicksy yarn about the Government Secretaries being sent about by I.W.W. men. Charles Garville will be on the shelf when the Franck Galoot takes to fiction (which is stranger than truth).

Sindlar, M.H.R., for Ipswich, was once referred to Higgs, M.H.R., as the bovine representative for a bovine constituency. In the debate on the Disgal Assurances Bill, Sindlar said in effect the following: "I was once in Melbourne some six or seven weeks ago and heard Tom Barker speaking. He said that he had been given four separate sentences of one year since the beginning of 1916, but said that the Government couldn't keep him in jail, because there were too many mysterious fire going on."

Sindlar, M.H.R., is an unmitigated politician. Nuff said.

and stores account to prevent two prices being accepted by a cook or cooks.

8. That men be allowed one hour for tea after evening work.

9. That hours of night and Sunday attendances be abolished.

10. In the event of those resolutions being accepted by all cooks, or should they be original or amended, the case may be put at a date to be mutually agreed upon.

11. That in the event of cooks not getting the rates at a shed, and any shearer or other worker taking on the cooking no cook shall cook for such man.

12. That in the event of pens being held for shearers the cooks shall be paid for the full complement of men from date of Roll Call.

Mooreland is still jugging the red class. Wagon-Planes struck a tree. He is well known in Sydney. Rev. Jennings, of Christchurch, has been in glad attendance, than was I have, and got an addition to his record of a year. He is an old sister of boy conscription, and for free speech. Tim Armstrong, who recently has been wharf-jumping in London, and previously was Secretary of the West Coast Workers' Union, got twelve months for a speech that was essentially commensurate, but what the absent garbage, Chaffinch Ward and Biston Massey would term "seditions." These two glorified parasites and ignoramuses had a reputation of a highly sympathetic order when they get back to Godswan.

STATEMENT OF PRINCIPLES.

The working class and the employing class have nothing in common. There can be no peace so long as hunger and want are found among millions of working people, and the few who make up the employing class have all the good things of life.

Between these two classes a struggle must go on until the workers of the world organize as a class, take possession of the earth and the machinery of production, and abolish the wage system.

We find that the centering of the management of industries into fewer and fewer hands makes the trade unions unable to cope with the ever-growing power of the employing class. The workers must organize a state of affairs which allows one set of workers to be pitted against another set of workers in the same industry, thereby helping to defeat one another in wage wars. Moreover, the trade unionist who employs class to mislead the workers into the belief that the working class have interests in common with their employers.

These conditions can be changed and the interests of the working class upheld only by an organization formed in such a way that its members in any one industry, or in all industries if necessary, cease work whenever a strike or lockout is on in any department thereof, thus making an injury to one an injury to all.

Instead of the conservative motto, "A fair day's wage for a fair day's work," we must inscribe on our banner the revolutionary watchword, "Abolition of the wage system." We must also abolish the state of affairs in which the class to do away with capitalism. The arm of production must be organized not only for the every-day struggle with capitalists, but also to carry on production when capitalism shall have been overthrown. By organizing industrially we are forming the structure of the new society within the shell of the old.
