Parents can provide the attention and time that most schools cannot

LinkedIn Twitter G+ Google+ Facebook 28 Email COMMENTS

There's a scrimmage of 40 Grade 1 learners in front of their new class. They bundle in and sit on their chairs. There is good discipline in the class, but there are so many learners that it's impossible for the teacher to give each of them the necessary attention. Only the smartest learners will do well, while the average child may miss a number of important building blocks and, eventually, it will
