ABOUT ME

Hi there! I'm a Web Dev and Digital Strategist from New York City. I started my political career as a volunteer for local district campaigns in 2009. Over the years, I experienced the various roles in an election campaign while studying Media and Communications at Queens College CUNY, graduating with a baccalaureate degree in 2011. After graduating, I taught myself Front End development due to my life-long passion in technology and building computers. In 2017, I began my career at NationBuilder as a Web Architect and Expert. I have a deep conviction that technology can help the political process in order to effect change to make people's lives much better.
