our country is the world our countrymen all mankind.

any thing existing in society, of the frequency and increased of crime, is the degraded character of the colored population.

We have taken our instances from various parts of the country, including those where the colored population is understood to be the most respectable.

Finally, it is alleged that the Society proposes to furnish the means for conveying away one million of the black population of the United States.

This objection is not a new one, and we do not think it necessary to repeat it.

The objection against the Colonization Society, is the most extraordinary of all.

EFFECTS OF SLAVERY ON MORALS AND INDUSTRY.

The attention of a friend has been furnished with a copy of a scarce and valuable pamphlet with the above title, published by Noah Webster, in 1773.

The tyrant is rough, boisterous, irritable, haughty, and equally insensible to the sufferings of his fellow men.

The tendency of tyranny, both civil and domestic, to annihilate the social affections, is so far as respects the oppressed, is very remarkable.

But in an particular are the deplorable effects of slavery more visible, than in checking or destroying the progress of agriculture, arts, commerce and science.

Having shown, by irrefragable argument and evidence, that the tendency of slavery is to corrupt both the owner and the slave, the author proposes to raise the slaves to the condition of free tenants.

It is to be wished that some patriotic and humane gentlemen in the southern States would make successful experiments upon their slaves.

A glorious experiment of this kind has been made by Zamoski, formerly great Chancellor of Poland.

In point of utility, the improvement of the peasant is equally reasonable. While they were slaves, they were frequently guilty of gross crimes.

LADIES' DEPARTMENT.

Can not a Woman and a Slave?

For the Liberator. THE CAPTIVE MAID'S LAMENT.

Red was the lawn, on memory's tablet dark, When our shores approached the white man's bark, When from the arms of kind affection torn, And o'er the waste of endless waters born.

Why was I fashioned thus, in human frame, If I pure here this vain-made heart must claim? Were reason, speech, and being, all bestowed, That I might better bear the weary load.

JUVENILE DEPARTMENT.

THE COMET.

A DIALOGUE BETWEEN A TEACHER AND HIS SCHOLAR.

Scholar. Can you tell me, sir, when the comet is coming, which is to burn the world up?

Teacher. What comes? Where do you learn that a comet is to destroy the world?

generally regard them as objects of alarm, and bear of their approach with terror?

T. The persons who thus fear the return of comets are generally either illiterate and superstitious, or else possess such an extreme degree of sensibility that it overpowers their judgment.

S. How many comets are there?

T. Some astronomers have supposed that about five hundred are connected with our system, but it is probable that some of these have been observed several times, and that in reality there are not so many. They move in almost all directions, but each separate comet passes its own path, and returns in the same track at regular periods.

S. How many comets have their returns calculated?

T. Only three with certainty. The first is called Encke's comet, from an astronomer of that name, who calculated its return to be in periods of about three years and four months.

S. What is the second comet?

T. This is called Halley's. It returns every six years and eight months. Its period therefore is double that of Encke's.

S. When will it return again?

T. It will probably be seen about the end of August next, near the Seven Stars. It will then be travelling at about the rate of fifteen hundred thousand miles a day.

S. It will be nearest the earth on the 23d of October, when its distance will be 51 millions of miles, that is, about twice the distance of Venus, or the Evening Star, when she is nearest the earth.

S. I shall be delighted when it comes.

T. Your delight will probably be increased by viewing a map of the comet, constructed by one of our native astronomers, Mr Barrist of Connecticut. He has published a beautiful copiate plan, handsomely painted, showing the path of the comet among the stars.

S. Will it be as bright when it returns again?

T. It is very large. When it appeared in 1456, its long train of light spread throughout Europe, and the Pope ordered a particular prayer to be read in all the churches on the occasion, that all evil apprehended from it might be averted.

WHITEFIELD AND SLAVERY. The Boston News Letter, of Feb. 8, 1770, contains an article from which we make the following extract.

I was greatly surprised and grieved, not long since, to find by Mr Whitefield's naming the government and council of Georgia, that his plan is to buy a number of Negro Slaves, whose labor are to support the President, professors and tutors of his college as well as overseer, and for other valuable purposes? Now as the slave trade is evidently a trade that is increasing, it is not only doing evil, that good and unmeaning, it is also doing evil, that is, it is doing evil, that is, it is doing evil, that is, it is doing evil.

it of the sin consists in buying a man at the price of the words of inspiration, in dealing it out as the souls of men; 'as was said of the merchants of Tyre, 'they traded the persons of men in the market.' Now if one man may not deal in human beings, neither may another. If it is a sin for the slaveholder to buy a man for his purpose, to plant a colony, it is a sin for the anti-slavery holder to buy a man for his purpose, to plant a colony.

ON VISITING THE SEAMEN'S CHURCH IN BOSTON. I entered 'midst the throngs of seafarers, and there I saw those hardy men pour out their souls in prayer; And those of various tongues and every clime were taught To taste of that salvation which Jesus' love had bought. One life is but a breath (the preacher said), and we are only floating upon a sea of peril...

MISCELLANEOUS.

Children lost in the Woods.—On Saturday, 28th April, two children belonging to Mr. Cross, of Westminister, Upper Canada, the one five and the other three years old, were, in the absence of the parents, allowed to go into the woods in quest of flowers and nuts. When Mrs. Cross returned home in the afternoon, and enquired for her children, she found the two to which we have alluded, with an elderly white man, who had been given to the neighbors, and a diligent search immediately made. At eight fire were lighted in the woods around the farm, with the hope of driving the children to the house...

Interesting Meeting.—It was agreed among the pioneers of the west, in 1782, that they or those of them who survived, should, at the expiration of 50 years meet at the mouth of the Mississippi. The meeting was accordingly held on the 22nd of September or October next, and preparations were making by the venerable men who were to appear, and numerous preparations were also in fulfillment. How indescribable must be their sensations, when the excited mixture pours into the mind the willing recollections of the past fifty years of their lives! What was the west in '82? How could they answer! What is it now? How could they reply!

From Rader's Weekly Messenger. CONVERSION AND HAPPY DEATH OF A POOR AFRICAN. It was on a Sabbath-day, that I was informed, that Elizabeth Killbuck was ill, and that I was requested to visit her. Accordingly I went, in company with a female friend. As we approached, I placed my hand on the rough gate, and as I dwelt on the entrance of the dwelling, I raised my eyes and they rested pleasantly upon the declining sun. During the day of my visit, the clouds, wind and rain, but now all was hushed in silence, and the pure azure canopy of heaven appeared as if it had never been disturbed by tempests. So, in thought, I entered the abode of Elizabeth, and discovered that she was in the last stages of her illness. I was received by a daughter of Elizabeth's, and shown into an adjoining room, where lay the patient, who had been confined for several days. Her eyes were closed, and she was in a state of insensibility. I took the bible and sented myself on the bed; 'Oh,' said she, 'how good it must be to you, to be able to read the word of God. I never could read myself, for I had no education. All that I know of which contains what good people have told me, is that which I have seen in the bible. I know; he came to save sinners, and I am a very great one.'
