It is supposed by many persons now residing at the South, that if the planters could not send off a few slaves annually, to make up the deficiency of income from their plantations, they would be obliged to abandon immediately the system of slavery. The Domestic Trade, in this view, is chargeable with the whole guilt of the continuance of slavery in several of the States. It is responsible to form any satisfactory account of the number of slaves annually sold in the United States, by the regular channels. There is no other branch of commerce, concerning which our government has given us no statistical information. It would be unaccountable if the republican government to publish these things, but not for a republican people to do them.

One of our Committee has information, on which we can rely, that one house in the District of Columbia exported one thousand and ten negroes in 1832, and will export the present year. They employ two vessels constantly. There is another house in the same District. A third, located in Georgetown, has been given up; not, however, on account of the decline of the trade, for that is allowed to be increasing. The price depressed at the moment, owing to the disengagement of the currency, but the trade is unquestionably brisk and profitable.

The high price of cotton and the return of the cotton trade last year, and the result of the same Meeting (for such it has been said the poor slaves esteem it) and the new tracts of cheap and fertile land, wrested from the Indians, and which will comprise, to increase the demand for slaves in the South and South-West, for some time to come.

Mr. Niles in his Register states that in the week, ending Sept. 10th, 1831, three hundred and seventy one slaves were reported in the New-Orleans papers as landed from the foreign, Alexandria, and New-Orleans markets. Supposing this to be an average number, it would follow that the Domestic maritime Slave Trade supplies that city with not less than twenty thousand slaves every year, three times the total importation from abroad into the United States, and for eight years more. We may add ten thousand for those landed in other States and territories, without touching at New Orleans, and twenty thousand for the inland trade, making a total of fifty thousand slaves annually. A large number of these are trafficked yearly, like swine and turkeys for sale. It is supposed by one gentleman in this Convention, that the number will this year exceed one hundred thousand.

It is a fact worthy of observation, that just before the Convention, a large number of slaves were imported from the West Indies, and that the trade was permitted, by our Constitution to cease, the Domestic was ready to begin. The turn of the tide could not have been calculated with more accuracy! Perhaps we are to this circumstance, that the law of 1808 was passed at all? It is a circumstance which would seem, by all accounts, to have been made in the northern slave States, to prepare a supply for the market, and to profit by the monopoly. And now this dreadful trade takes place, that 50,000 slaves are only domestic article, the production of which, is encouraged by a prohibitory tariff.

In conclusion, your Committee recommend an earnest and early appeal to Congress on the subject of the trade, and to the Convention, that a petition, setting forth the constitutional law, and the practical horrors and atrocities relating to this trade, be drafted under the direction of the New-England Anti-Slavery Society, and printed with the minutes of this Convention, and sent to all Agents and to all Anti-Slavery Societies, for circulation and signatures, and they recommend the passage of the following resolve: Resolved, As the opinion of this Convention, that the Domestic Slave Trade of the United States is a trade, which is in the sight of God with the foreign, that it equally involves the crimes of murder, kidnapping and robbery, and is equally worthy of the same denunciation and treated by human laws and tribunals as piracy, and those who engage in it as enemies of the human race. Signed, D. LEE CHILD, JOHN FROST, JOHN RAY POTTER, JESSE PUTNAM, JOSEPH SOUTHWICK, Rev. Mr. Frost, Rev. Mr. Hays, of Waukeset.
