

"All I can tell you is that our capacity is for 108 men and women, and the jail is holding more than that."

Roadside County Jail, Salem, Virginia

ATLANTA FOR ABOLITION: DISMANTLE THE PRISON INDUSTRIAL COMPLEX

The exhibition of Degrees of Visibility will include a series of events, including an weekend of cultural events and workshops, hosted by Project South, SNAP Co, SONG and Critical Resistance.

From the founding of the United States until the present, the South has perpetuated a legacy of state-driven racial and economic oppression, whether through slavery, convict leasing, Jim Crow laws, or imprisonment. However as with abolition of slavery and the movement for civil rights, people in the South and in particular Black communities, have also been on the frontlines of resistance, continuing their own legacies of struggle.

Through the building of resilient and participatory communities, like in Jackson, Mississippi, or in fighting state repression, as in the Free Alabama Movement and other southern leadership in recent prisoner strikes, organizing in the South continues to make strides towards liberation that inspires allied movements nationally.

At Critical Resistance (CR), we are taking steps to support national work outside our chapter cities, including Southern movements for liberation. CR has historically engaged in organizing in New Orleans, Atlanta, Durham, and supported other Southern movement building. This year, we are building on our history and connecting with Atlanta area partners working to get cops out of schools, decrease arrested and jailed populations, and build community based models for safety. We're thrilled to announce "Atlanta for Abolition: Dismantle the Prison Industrial Complex" as part of Profiles in Abolition, a series of events intended to reinvigorate critical understandings of the prison industrial complex and inspire us to take practical steps toward a future free of policing, imprisonment, or surveillance.

DEGREES OF VISIBILITY Ashley Hunt, With Critical Resistance, Project South, Solutions Not Punishment Coalition (SNAP Co), and Southerners on New Ground (SONG) Presented by WonderRoot and Profiles in Abolition

As a six-year survey of the visual politics of the prison industrial complex, Degrees of Visibility offers a body of photographs that study the landscapes in which over 250 prisons, jails and detention centers sit, throughout each of the fifty US states and territories. Each photograph is shot from a publicly available point of view, and is titled according to the number of people imprisoned and concealed within that view. While in some, that number is described in the language of the system itself, in others, the prison's language gives way to a history, a document or record that offers a different understanding of the space. All statistics were obtained between 2013 and 2016.

The project is a study of the aesthetic regime that governs today's prison and industrial complex, documenting how history's largest system of civil imprisonment has been enabled through its disguise within everyday landscapes — disappearance the bodies, practices and systemic inequalities it conceals among various types of space and land-use. Recognizing today's mass imprisonment as one arm of a larger system of racial, class and gendering controls that structure the United States' hierarchies, segregation, policies, rooted in the prison's racial and security practices and the ongoing manufacture of political consent. To counter this systemic erasure, this survey offers a visual literacy in the systems, spaces, and economies in which we encounter prisons and histories that attempt to conceal.

Rather than see this as a politics of appearance — an aestheticic organization that is as integral to a different space in which we can imagine incarceration truly begins — without the prison, studies this as a politics of appearance, however, Degrees of Visibility studies this as a politics of appearance — an aestheticic organization that is as integral to a different space in which we can imagine incarceration truly begins, it is in the Post-War years, as Jim Crow segregation.

The seeds of this body of work were sown during the Civil Rights movement, when the 1960s and 70s. While mass incarceration truly provided it is in the Post-War years, as Jim Crow segregation, policing and imprisonment regime of today replaced the social and political contracts that the 1960s and 70s. While mass incarceration truly begins after Emancipation, when the prison breaks down, that the system begins to militarize, professionnalize and multiply to the globe unprecedeted scale we see today.

At this same, a two-hundred year history of modern prison architecture shifted, from designs that highlight the presence of the prison to ones that camouflaged and disappear appear necessary, and redefine safety as we know it.

It is for this reason that the public presentation of Degrees of visibility is conceived in partnership with organizations who are dedicated to changing the very society that needs prisons and policing; groups who, instead of asking for limited reforms that will ultimately strengthen the system, fight instead to diminish it, to abolish the conditions that make it

Partnering Organizations

In the history of connection or capture and forced labor preceding the modern era, windows and curtain walls, ramparts—but instead of keeping things out they are designed to keep them in. This connection suggests that the prison is, at its root, dedicated to a continual form of warfare against those considered “enemies” and “outsiders.” This history tells us much more about the nature of the prison industrial complex than motivations toward overt profit represented by prison labor or for-profit prisons.

Critical Resistance – Critical Resistance seeks to build an international movement to end the Prison Industrial Complex (PIC) by challenging the belief that caging and controlling people makes us safe. We believe that basic necessities such as food, shelter, and freedom are what really make our communities secure. As such, our work is part of global struggles against inequality and powerlessness. The success of the movement requires that it reflect communities most affected by the PIC. Because we seek to abolish the PIC, we cannot support any work that extends its life or scope.

1766 man woman levitation Enniskillen County Donegal Contour levitation 1766 man woman levitation efforts to reduce the power and reach of the prison industrial complex while building up community resources towards addressing harm and accountability. At CR, we are taking steps to support national work outside our chapter cities, including contributing towards Southern movements for liberation with recognition of the crucial role the South plays in fighting racial oppression. CR has historically engaged in organizing in New Orleans, Atlanta, Durham, and supported other Southern movement building. Towards that effort, CR is thrilled to partner with local organizations for "Atlanta for Abolition: Dismantle the Prison Industrial Complex". This event is offered as part of Profiles in Abolition, a series of events intended to reinvigorate critical understandings of the prison industrial complex and inspire us to take practical steps toward a future free of policing, imprisonment, or surveillance. www.criticalresistance.org

Project South – Project South is a Southern-based leadership development organization that creates spaces for movement building. We work with communities pushed forward by the struggle – to strengthen leadership and to provide popular political and economic education for personal and social transformation. We build relationships with organizations and networks across the US and global South to inform our local work and to engage in bottom-up movement building for social and economic justice. Project South works on defunding of police in schools and on shutting down immigration detention centers as well as federal immigrant-only prisons.” <http://projectsouth.org/> sure of signifiers of punishment so that a jail will look like a neutral office building; or the Lexington-Fayette Urban County Detention Center in Kentucky, whose 1999 reconstruction is designed to resemble the surrounding racing horse barns.

This was embodied especially by the 1990 expansion of the Marin County Jail, which the prison's security arsenal.

it, as the obvious contradiction between the era's promises of equality and its heightened repression required new and more secretive spaces. Similarly, as this repression bred resistance and identification with anti-colonial revolutions around the world, an

Schedule of Events

Saturday October 29 – Social Change Screen Printing Workshop

Friday November 4th, 6pm to 10pm – Join us for a FREE cultural event. Featuring DJ, Performances, Interactive Art Exhibit, and Speakers. Free food, drinks for donation.

November 5th, 10am to 3pm – Free workshop on Atlanta campaigns and Southern history towards abolishing the prison industrial complex. Coffee and lunch provided. RSVP required away them from jail and prosecution by connecting them to high quality, community-based treatment and support services. The goal is to improve individual and community quality of life through research-based, public health-oriented interventions. Pre-arrest diversion programs consist of both a law enforcement and social services component. <http://snaps4freedom.org/>

All events take place at WonderRoot

SONG – Mission: SONG is a home for LGBIU liberation across all lines of race, class, abilities, age, culture, gender, and sexuality in the South. We build, sustain, and connect a southern regional base of LGBTQ people in order to transform the region through strategic projects and campaigns developed in response to the current conditions in our communities. SONG builds this movement through leadership development, intersectional analysis, and organizing.

Southerners On New Ground is advancing the Atlanta real immigrant campaign, demanding the city create income based fines and fees in order to cut off the private probation pipeline. Across counties Southerners On New Ground in collaboration with the GA-Not1More Deportation campaign is fighting to end deportations.

<http://southernersonnewground.org/>

WonderRoot – WonderRoot is an Atlanta-based nonprofit arts and service organization with a mission to unite artists and community to inspire positive social change.

knowledge base and community to incubate and catalyze progressive social change. We will do this work by serving as fertile ground for artistic innovation and by building bridges between makers and doers at all stages in their lives.

We imagine an Atlanta with an aware and mobilized public. An Atlanta where place matters and change happens through an equitable cultural ecosystem and by the responsible sharing of resources. This will happen through an integration of the arts into active forms of city and community building where people of social difference have the agency to move and think freely for themselves and for others.<http://www.wonderroot.org/>

Rather than see art as only a space of reflection, I see it as a space of action, where the meanings and perceptions that art has the ability to activate mingle with people's lives, always taking place within a set of social relations, amidst economies, politics and possibility. For this project, it has been important to work with a venue who recognizes this and sees it as a part of what it facilitates, while also seeking community organizations to help shape the space of its audience, interpretation and potential effects as they are carried beyond the walls of the gallery.

Ashley Hunt is an artist living in Los Angeles, where he directs the Program in Photography and Media at CalArts.

*Ashley Hunt is an artist.
Media at CalArts.*

remained a partner in shaping my thinking, connecting my work to organizing and helping me to better understand what art can do in the world.

Detail from 2,306 men and 488 women, Folsom State Prison, Folsom, California videos around their Southern conference, one following their organizing process that opened the 2003 conference, and a second documenting the conference itself and the many communities who came together to stop the prison industrial complex in the US South.

My first introduction to Critical Resistance was in 1998. A number of friends from Chicago had just returned from CR's first national conference in Berkeley, energized by the thousands of activists who turned up, seeking ideas and strategies for changing the system, and recognizing with one another that change and a different future would be possible.

It was in 2000 while shooting for my first film at New Fuzion Prison that I passed through the gates of H-Block, where a man was held for nearly 20 years.

From Critical Resistance: www.criticalresistance.org

To: [REDACTED]
Subject: [REDACTED] - [REDACTED]
Date: [REDACTED]

Original message from [REDACTED] on [REDACTED]

CRITICAL RESISTANCE

1998-2000: The Movement Grows Stronger

Friends,